INTRODUCTION

As far as can be determined, every particular (congregational) church gathered prior to 1806 within the present-day borders of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts is represented in the following inventory. Churches which were only briefly congregational and which later affiliated with another tradition (such as the Baptist), as well as churches which had their origins in non-congregational traditions (such as the Presbyterian) and later became congregational, are included. Given in alphabetical sequence are, as well, the variant names of all of these churches and their related precincts, towns, parishes and societies: e.g., the church in Dalton, originally having been known as the church in Ashuelot or Ashuelot Equivalent, those latter names are listed with cross-reference to the Dalton entry.¹

The following reference works have been employed in ¹Only those variant names actually encountered by the author are entered here: e.g., the church in Blackstone is duly listed, together with the earlier variant, "Mendon, South Church and Precinct." However, no entry is made under the logically possible variant, "South Mendon, Church and Precinct," because no reference to a "South Mendon" was met in the course of these studies.

It has not been practicable to report in full the data given on each church by any or all of these authorities. Instead, the information has been epitomized, and only such errors remarked as might seriously affect the work of researchers using this inventory as a bibliographical tool.

The exact date of the gathering of each church has been verified as carefully as possible.¹ In some instances, two ¹Even if it might encourage some churches to reconsider the dates on which they are to celebrate their periodic anniversaries, it has been the unvarying practice in this inventory to consider the formal act of entering into church covenant as the date on which a given church was born. Local secular and church historians have a penchant for "dating" a particular church from the first action taken by a town to provide religious services for the inhabitants, or from the day of the first sermon preached in that locality.

Denominational yearbooks, furthermore, uncritically publish what the churches report, leaving the accuracy of dates open to the vagaries of local antiquarians, to the confusion of precinct/parish events with those of the church, and to the perpetuation of typographical errors. E.g., the church in West Barnstable dates itself 1616, claiming identity with Henry Jacob's church formed in that year at Southwark, England; the Second Church of Beverly dates itself 1713, from the incorporation of its related precinct, rather than from 1715, when the actual covenanting took place; the churches in the same community claim the same date of organization, thereby constituting a doublet. Since the inventory's terminus ad quem falls prior to the Congregational-Unitarian separation of the early nineteenth century, the procedure has been to make primary reference to the church holding the records, mentioning any rival claimant only marginally; e.g., the primary reference regarding Scituate is made to The First Parish Unitarian Church of that town, while only passing mention is made of The Congregational Church of Scituate, which also claims the original founding date of 1634/35.

Capsule histories of the churches are not intended, and only such brief notes are given as will provide a swift identification or clarify a complicated line of local development.¹ With regard to the lists of clergymen who served these churches, the writer must acknowledge a large debt to Frederick L. Weis' The Colonial Clergy and The Colonial Churches of New England (Lancaster, Mass., 1936). Whatever corrections of Weis' work were called for, have usually been made without special comment.¹ In some instances, the listings of ruling elders and deacons are incomplete, due to the absence or fragmentary nature of the church's records.² Innumerable gaps in such listings could be filled by consulting town, parish and cemetery records, together with the historical and genealogical studies published in profusion by towns, societies and families; this task, however, belongs more properly to the local antiquarian and the genealogist.

UUA Directory has for several years reported the Ashby church as gathered in 1767, perpetuating the transposition of numerals that obscures the actual date of the church's gathering, 1776.

¹Data on institutional developments since 1900 (e.g., the date of a church's incorporation) has not always been available. Frequently, such information is contained in record books currently in use and therefore not consulted by the present writer.

The abbreviations employed in listings of clerical and lay personnel are:

b.	= born
ca.	= circa
cta.	= ceased to act
d.	= died
dism.	= dismissed from office
e.	= elected to office
elev.	= elevated
inst.	= installed in office
m.	= mentioned
ord.	= ordained to office
rem.	= removed from town
res.	= resigned office
sett.	= settled

Three pioneer attempts at inventorying the existence

¹Supplementary sources of information used occasionally in preparing the inventory were the Emerson Davis typescript "Biographical Sketches of the Congregational Pastors of New England; arranged alphabetically according to churches," owned and held by the Congregational Library, Boston; Harvard Graduates (ed. by J. L. Sibley), Vols. I-III (continued by Clifford K. Shipton, through Vol. XIII) (Cambridge and Boston, 1873-1965).

²Few volumes of church records contain reliable bills of mortality.

and condition of the original records of the churches have been consulted in the preparation of this inventory:

Carroll D. Wright. Report on the Custody and Condition of the Public Records of Parishes, Towns, and Counties. Boston, 1889.¹

Frederick L. Weis, Christopher R. Eliot, and Robert D. Richardson. "Early Records of the [forty-five] Seventeenth Century Churches in Massachusetts Which Became Unitarian," Proceedings of the Unitarian Historical Society, VII, ii (1941), 11-22.

Emil Oberholzer, Jr. Delinquent Saints: Disciplinary Action in the Early Congregational Churches of Massachusetts. New York, 1956. Pp. 337-355.

The original goal of this inventory, that of noting all books of records opened before 1900, has not always proven possible to achieve.²

Where a church has arranged for the storage of its records by an historical society or public library, this is noted for the convenience of researchers who must ¹Wright's Report as Massachusetts Commissioner of Public Records relied solely on data supplied by local correspondents. The latter, at best having personal acquaintance with the records of two or three communities, lacked any adequate standards by which to justify reporting (as they did) whether the records in their keeping provided good, poor or average coverage. The published Report, never reliable, has been rendered virtually useless by the ensuing passage of three-quarters of a century.

nevertheless assume that permission from the owner church is prerequisite to being granted access to the records by their custodians.¹ In the case of extinct churches, the officers of the repository holding such a church's records determine under what conditions the records may be consulted, although being "public documents" by law they are accessible to any applicant.

Turning to the documents themselves, the first major concern has been to locate and describe the running records of the church, containing the votes and other business transactions of the church qua ecclesiastical entity. Such running records are designated "CR," followed by an appropriate Roman numeral to indicate its place in the chronological sequence of record books belonging to a given church. Where a book contains only vital statistics (and may be a later extract or copy of original records), it is designated "VS." Records of church officers (e.g., deacons' sacramental accounts) and church committees are listed in abbreviated form under the rubric, "miscellaneous records."

The second major concern, where the church holds the records of its now-extinct prudential organization,¹ has been to locate and describe the running records of such prudential bodies. These running records are designated "PR" (precinct or parish records), "SR" (society records), "PROP" (proprietors records), "PEW" (pewholders records) and "MF" (ministerial fund records), followed by the appropriate numeral.² Records of the officers (e.g., assessors, collectors, treasurers) and committees of these prudential bodies are listed in abbreviated form. No attempt has been made to locate precinct/parish/society records where these ¹Obviously, for most towns, the earliest "prudential records," are comprised by the town records where extant. However, although such town records (TR) have been consulted at appropriate points, no systematic survey of such materials has been attempted here, and attention instead has been given to those bodies, - precincts, parishes, and societies, - which took up the "prudential concerns" of religious life once the town laid them down.

Only a handful of Massachusetts churches today maintain the old dual system of "church and parish," the vast majority having chosen instead to incorporate the church so that it may legally transact prudential business.

²While there are important differences among "precincts," "parishes," and "societies," there is a regular chronological sequence with regard to these designations. A portion of an already-existing town is set off as a "precinct," usually enabling the latter to support a gathered church of its own. In time, the "precinct" becomes a "town," and the "town" handles the church's prudential affairs until (soon or late) it decides to create a "parish" to attend specifically to such matters. After disestablishment in 1833, the "parish" frequently continued under that title (although losing its distinctive characteristics as a "poll parish") or sometimes was restructured as a "society," while new prudential organizations formed after 1833 were uniformly designated as "societies."

have been separated from the church records and retained by the town as part of its records.

Deliberately omitted from this inventory are the surviving records of the educational and fellowship organizations (e.g., Sabbath school, women's society) of these churches, and the abundance of uncalendared loose papers (e.g., warrants, bills, receipts, correspondence, etc.) which many churches have saved as memorabilia.

Manuscript, microfilm and published copies of church running records (or extensive extracts therefrom) have been noted where known to exist. Some special mention should be made of the Cooke Collection of records of Berkshire County (and adjacent New York) churches. These transcripts, made around 1900 by Rollin H. Cooke, have since been typed and bound; the Collection is owned and held by the Berkshire Athenaeum, Pittsfield, Mass.¹

As to secondary sources of information, the thoroughness of search in each instance has been inversely proportional to the information readily available about a given church from its own records. Church manuals and histories have been an object of special concern, both because of their utility and their ephemeral nature. For anyone needing extensive listings of secondary materials, Charles A. Flagg's A Guide to Massachusetts Local History (Salem, 1907) has not yet outworn its usefulness.

¹Some microfilming of church, parish and town records was done in recent years by representatives of the Genealogical Society of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; however, the Society's Library Supervisor states that no listing of records filmed can be furnished. To my knowledge, only two or three churches, whose records were thus filmed, purchased copies of the film for their own archives.

As it is inevitable that errors will be found in this listing and inventory, so it is to be hoped that they will prove to be marginal inaccuracies. More important, researchers working in areas geographically or topically more limited, will occasionally uncover items which escaped my notice--records stored in a seldom-visited corner of a town hall vault, records that lie forgotten in someone's attic. As these fugitive materials are brought to light, the value of this inventory will lie in having encouraged the study and careful preservation of these documentary treasures of the Pilgrim-Puritan churches.¹

¹Occasionally the reader will meet with reference in the ensuing pages to a "thesis," to which the inventory itself is described as a bibliographical appendage. The present publication is a photo-offset copy of the original typescript of that inventory, and it was not possible to retype all the pages where reference to the thesis is made.

ABINGTON, First (C).

The church was gathered on Nov. 17, 1714. A temporary separation occurred in 1745, but no schismatic church resulted. The First Parish was organized in 1832.

Ministers: Samuel Brown (called 1711; ord. 1714;
d. 1749)
Ezekiel Dodge (ord. 1750; d. 1770)
Samuel Niles (ord. 1771; d. 1814)

Ruling elders: none.

Deacons: Ebenezer Whitmarsh (e. 1714) Joseph Lincoln (e. 1717; ejected from the diaconate 1723)
Samuel French (e. 1722; d. 1738 ?)
Edward Bates (e. 1727)
Joshua Shaw¹ (e. 1735)
Samuel Pool (e. 1750)
John Noyes (e. 1750)
---- Whitman (m. 1780-1782)
Daniel Shaw (e. 1777-1779; m. 1805)
Eleazar Williams (e. 1777-1779)
Jacob Pool (m. 1804-1805)
[Jacob Tirrell (e. before 1820)]²
[David Torrey (e. before 1820)]²

The records are church property, and are deposited with the local historical society, which has headquarters in the town library building.

Miscellaneous records: Parish Assessors' Rate Book, 1867-1868; Parish Treasurer's Accounts, 1808-1877; Parish Treasurer's (and Collector's) Accounts, 1876-1886; Parish Treasurer's Accounts, 1886-1894.

ACTON, First (U), extinct.

The church was gathered on Nov. 8, 1738. The orthodox withdrew in 1832, and the Unitarian wing continued to hold services of worship until the church of the parish was dissolved in 1850.

Ministers: John Swift (ord. 1738; d. 1775)
Moses Adams (ord. 1777; d. 1819)

Ruling elders: none.

Deacons:	Joseph Fletcher	(e. 1738; d. 1746)
	John Heald	(e. 1738; d. 1775)
	Jonathan Hosmer	(m. 1779; d. 1775)
	John Brooks	(m. 1772; d. 1777)
	Capt. Samuel Hayward	(e. 1775; d. 1795)
	Francis Faulkner	(e. 1775; d. 1805)

Joseph Brabook (e. 1775; d. 1812)
 Simon Hunt (e. 1792; d. 1820)

CR I - "Church Records. Rev. John Swift. Rev. Moses Adams. 1738-1818."

Following the notice in this volume of the ordination of the second minister, Moses Adams, the following entry appears: "It is evident that Mr. Swift had little more in view than brief memoranda for his own use. I regret that I did not at the beginning of my ministry procure a larger book & keep a more particular & extensive record. I hope my successor will profit by this hint. M. A." Adams' successor did indeed procure a large book in 1820, but the records are few, continuing only to 1834 when regular preaching ended in the Church of the First Parish.

CR II - "Church Records. Rev. Marshall Shedd. 1820-1834."

PR I - Parish Records, 1826-1860.

PR II - "Records of the First Parish in Action." 1860-1861.

Miscellaneous records: untitled book, containing vital statistics, 1777-1844, copied in part from church records.

ACUSHNET Congregational Church (see New Bedford).

ADAMS, First (C), extinct.

The church, which was originally gathered in 1766, nearly became extinct after Todd's dismissal. It was revived in 1782; however, worship services were held only occasionally. The meetinghouse was rebuilt in 1794, during the part-time ministry of a Baptist preacher. (Local Baptist church organization dates from 1808.)

Minister: Samuel Todd (inst. 1766; dism. 1778; d. 1789)

As early as 1829, it was reported that no records of Todd's church were extant. See A History of the County of Berkshire, Massachusetts; in Two Parts (Pittsfield, Mass., 1829), pp. 422-442.

AGAWAM, Feeding Hills, First (C).

The church was gathered on Nov. 10, 1762 as the Sixth Church of Christ in Springfield. When the area became a town in 1774, the church took the appropriate name of the Second Church in West Springfield.

1800 saw the Second Parish divided into Feeding Hills and Agawam, and 1808 the name of the one church changed to the Church in the Fourth Parish of West Springfield. In 1819, an independent church was gathered in Agawam, the original church being situated at Feeding Hills; however, by 1831, the two churches were being served by a single minister, and reunification followed shortly after. Agawam became a town in 1855, and the church took the title of the First Church in Agawam.

Minister: Sylvanus Griswold (ord. 1762; d. 1819)

Deacons: John Leonard (e. 1762)
Reuben Leonard (e. 1762)
Joseph Bodurtha (e. 1791)

The records are owned and held by the church, unless otherwise noted.

ALFORD (C), extinct.

The church was gathered in 1779, but after Avery's dismissal, declined sharply in membership. In 1817 the surviving Congregationalists arranged with local Baptists and Methodists jointly to build and support a "Union Meeting-house," which the Congregational body might use a quarter of the time. By 1846, this Congregational body must have been considered extinct, since in that year a new Congregational church was gathered in Alford.

Minister: Joseph Avery (ord. 1779; dism. 1787; d. 1814)

Ruling elders: none.

Deacons: Eleazar Barrett (m. 1779; d. 1823)
Robert Johnson (m. 1779)

No records of this church are known to exist. See A History of the County of Berkshire, Massachusetts; in Two Parts (Pittsfield, Mass., 1829), pp. 235-238.

ALMSEBURY (see Amesbury).

AMESBURY, First (Sandy Hill) (C), extinct.

The church was gathered in 1668 or more probably, in 1672, and was variously known as the First Church and the Sandy Hill Church and latterly as the Church in the East Precinct (or East Parish) in Amesbury. In 1835, Benjamin Sawyer, the minister of the Rocky Hill Church (see below), accepted an invitation to serve both churches. With this arrangement in mind, the East or Sandy Hill Parish was dissolved that same year. However, by 1841 regular preaching was discontinued at Sandy Hill, and by 1847 even occasional services were ended and the church itself was extinct.

Hoyt, I, p. 28 (see below, CR II PUB), writing in 1902, remarked that there were no records of this church antedating 1730/31, adding: "The first book of records, covering the period of the first pastorate (1672-1728) . . . was probably destroyed many years since, though it is barely possible that it may yet be found, in the hands of some descendent of Rev. Thomas Wells. It was certainly in existence in 1733, as appears by a reference to it in the second book of records." (II, p. 476). Earlier, the unnamed compilers of Essex North Association's Contributions to the Ecclesiastical History of Essex County, Mass. (Boston, 1865), p. 228, had stated: "The church records cannot be found, though supposed to be in existence."

Church Needfull to Posterity Entered & Registred per me Edmd: March, The 2d: Pastor of Sd. Church. ordained July 3d: 1728. Vid: Page 14. of 1st. Book of Records."

The title is supplied by Hoyt, II, p. 476, who gives the following data on this book of records: "This second book was in the hands of the Kendrick family forty years ago [circa 1860], but now it can not be found. It has been suggested that this book was probably burned in a building at Bartlett's Corner, some years hence. The compiler of this [present] volume used these records in preparing his Hoyt genealogy, and made a copy of some portions of the book, selecting loose and torn leaves and portions which seemed most likely to be destroyed or become illegible, as well as some of the oldest and most important parts. Now that the original has disappeared, it seems important to preserve some of these fragments by printing them in this volume"

AMESBURY, "Second" (Rocky Hill) (C), extinct.

This church was gathered on Nov. 19, 1718 as the Second Church in Salisbury, and was also known as the Rocky Hill Church. After Salisbury East and West Parishes were established in 1793, it was known (until 1886) as the Church in the West Parish in Salisbury.

Amesbury's First Church was the Sandy Hill Church of 1668 or 1672 (see above); her Second Church or West Church, dating from 1726, is now the church in Merrimac.

Merrimac became an independent town in 1876, leaving Amesbury with only one ancient church, Sandy Hill, and that only a memory.

In 1886, western Salisbury was ceded to Amesbury, and with it Salisbury's Second or West or Rocky Hill meetinghouse, the church having failed to survive the death of its minister, Benjamin Sawyer, in 1871.¹

Emil Oberholzer, Jr., Delinquent Saints (New York, 1956), p. 340, erroneously identifies this Second or Rocky Hill Church as the present Congregational church in Merrimac.

In 1807, with the precinct's incorporation as a town, the title was appropriately changed to the First Congregational (Church and) Parish of West Cambridge. The change of the town's name in 1867 accounts for the present title of the First Congregational (Church and) Parish of Arlington.

1. Some authorities give Jan. 20, 1747 as the date of the church's gathering. But the earliest reference, viz. Isaac Backus, A [Church] History of New-England, With particular Reference to the Denomination of Christians called Baptists, II (Providence, 1784), p. 175, appears to be correct in settling for the later date. Frederick L. Weis, The Colonial Clergy and The Colonial Churches of New England (Lancaster, Mass., 1936) cites the 1747 date on p. 239 and the 1748 date on p. 185. C. C. AUBURN, First (C).

The church was gathered on Jan. 25, 1776 as the Church in the South Parish of Worcester, the South Precinct of Worcester having been organized in 1773. The area was given the name of Ward in 1778, and in 1837 incorporated as the town of Auburn; the name of the church changed accordingly, first to the Church in Ward, and latterly to the Church in Auburn. The First Religious Society in Ward was organized in 1824. On Dec. 13, 1889,¹ the church incorporated under the title of the First Congregational Church in Auburn; the society dissolved the following year.

BARNSTABLE, West (C).

The church claims identity with the one gathered in 1616 at Southwark, England, under the ministry of Henry Jacob. A majority of the members, it is held, removed to New England in 1634, settling at Scituate, where they were joined by thirteen men, heretofore members of the church at Plymouth.

As against the claim of the Barnstable church's being gathered in 1616, there is the clear testimony of the Southwark-Scituate-Barnstable pastor, John Lothrop, that on Jan. 8, 1634/35¹ "wee had a day of humiliation and then att night joyned in covenaut togeather, so many of us as had beene in Covenaut before. . .," and further that Lothrop himself (having resigned the Southwark pastorate to speed his release from prison) was not inducted into office at Scituate till eleven days later,² while deacons were not chosen until August of 1635. The Scituate group, in short, considered the events of Jan. 8, 1634/35 to be the gathering of a new church.

On Oct. 11, 1639, Lothrop and an undetermined number of Scituate church members having removed to Barnstable, a second fresh beginning was made. Lothrop writes under date of Oct. 31, 1639, that a day of humiliation was held in gratitude "ffor the grace of our God to Settle us here in Church Estate, and to unite us togeather in holy Walkeing, and to make us Faithfull in keeping Covenaut with God, & one to another," while on Dec. 11 following, a day of thanksgiving was observed "for Gods exceeding mercye in bringing us hither Safely keeping us healthy & well in o^r weake beginnings & in our church Estate" ¹

 The church, then, appears to have been gathered on Oct. 11, 1639. In 1717, Barnstable was divided into two precincts, the older church being located in the western half, ²where a parish had been incorporated in the year preceding.

BERLIN, Federated (C, U).

The church was gathered on April 7, 1779 as the Church in the South Parish of Bolton, which parish had been incorporated in 1778. In 1784, with the organization of the town of Berlin, the church's name was changed to that of the Church of Christ in Berlin.

This church and parish being Unitarian in sympathy, on March 25, 1883 the orthodox organized the Evangelical Congregational Society in Berlin and gathered a church. The older Unitarian church and society were dissolved in 1843, but Unitarianism reorganized at a later date, probably in 1872.

The present Federated Church or First Parish Church was constituted in 1947 by the Congregationalist, Unitarian and Methodist churches of the town.

Minister: Reuben Puffer, D.D. (ord. 1781; d. 1829)

Ruling elders: none.

Deacons:¹ Deacon Josiah Sawyer (e. 1787; res. 1799)
 James Goddard (e. 1787; res. 1807)
 Jonathan Merriam (e. 1799; res. 1815)

The records are church property, and are deposited in the town library.

BERNARDSTON, First (U).

The church was gathered on Nov. 25, 1741 as the Church in Falltown, the name being changed when the town of Bernardston was organized in 1762. The Society appears to have been organized about 1817, and was incorporated as the Congregational Unitarian Society of Bernardston in 1891.

Ministers: John Norton (ord. 1741; dism. 1745; d. 1778)
 Job Wright (ord. 1761; dism. 1782; d. 1823)
 Amasa Cook (ord. 1783; dism. 1805; d. 1816)

1. Amos Merriam and Joshua Johnson served provisionally as deacons during the church's formative years, but appear never to have been formally ordained or installed. Sawyer, who helped to organize the church, was apparently a deacon elsewhere, and served in the same capacity in this church until formally elected to the post in 1787.

Ruling elders: none.

BEVERLY, First (U).

Following action taken by Salem's First Church on Mar. 23, 1667, this church was gathered on Sept. 20 of the same year; its parish was organized in 1718. The Trustees of the Ministerial Fund were incorporated in 1832. The church was early known as "the Church of Christ at Bass River in Salem" and as "the church at the North Side of the Ferry." During the nineteenth century, it was also popularly called "South" or "Old South" Church.

BLACKSTONE (C), extinct.

The church was gathered on Sept. 14, 1768 as the Church in the South Precinct of Mendon. Sources indicate that the church had no regular ministry after 1812, and that it became extinct about 1830.

The South Precinct of Mendon (incorporated in 1766) became the town of Blackstone in 1845, and inasmuch as the meetinghouse was still standing, it was popularly designated the meetinghouse of the First Parish in Blackstone. A further alteration of boundary lines in 1916 placed the building in the town of Millville, where it stands today, claimed as the oldest unaltered meetinghouse in Massachusetts. It is frequently described as the Chestnut Hill Church.

Frederick L. Weis, Let the Work of the Fathers Stand (n.p., 1941), holds that the church elected the Unitarian position toward the end of its existence (see also his The Colonial Clergy and The Colonial Churches of New England [Lancaster, Mass., 1936], p. 241). He offers as evidence the fact that a new orthodox Congregational Church was organized in the area in 1841. Several additional facts, however, call his conclusion into question. For one thing, Preserved Smith, the last regular minister at the Chestnut Hill Meeting House, did not himself declare for Unitarianism until 1820, eight years after relinquishing the Chestnut Hill post. Furthermore, the preacher supplying Chestnut Hill from 1820 to 1822 was a Baptist, while the supply from 1826 till the church ceased to function was an orthodox Congregationalist. It seems more reasonable, therefore, to list this church as an extinct Congregational body.

BLANDFORD (P/C).

The church was gathered in 1735 at Hopkinton by the Reverend Thomas Prince, minister of Boston's Third (Old South) Church; its membership consisted largely of Presbyterian immigrants hailing from Northern Ireland, together with a sprinkling of Irish Independents. From 1735 to 1741, it was known as the (Presbyterian) Church in Glasco; in the latter year, the area became the town of Blandford, and the church continued under that title. In 1801, the church voted to adopt congregational principles, an action rescinded later the same year. In 1805, it voted once again to become a Congregational church, a decision that this time remained firm. The First Christian Society in Blandford was incorporated in 1799, and was superceded by the First Religious Society incorporated in 1874.

BOLTON, First (U).

The church was gathered on Nov. 4, 1741. The First Parish in Bolton was organized in 1778, being succeeded in 1834 by The First Parish and Religious Society. The church and society were incorporated as one body in 1905. On Feb. 28, 1931, the Unitarians federated with the local Baptist church and Friends Meeting, retaining the title of The First Parish and Religious Society. At the present time, each retains its separate identity, although one minister serves the whole federated body.

BOLTON, Second (C), extinct.

Thomas Goss, minister of Bolton's First Church, was dismissed by church and town alike in 1771 on charges of maladministration. (Goss' Toryism aggravated the offence in the eyes of his parishioners.)

Instituting an unsuccessful lawsuit to collect his salary from the town, Goss proceeded to gather a Second Church, and held services in his home. After his death in 1780, the membership of the Second Church was gradually reabsorbed in the First Church.

Alexander Gordon, Dictionary of National Biography (Oxford, 1921-1922), VII, 45-46, and Williston Walker, The Creeds and Platforms of Congregationalism (New York, 1893), p. 290, confuse two Gyles Firmins, father and son, erroneously making the son appear to have been the Boston deacon. For evidence that it was the senior Firmin (not his son, later distinguished in England as a partisan of presbyterianism) who officiated at Boston, see Winthrop's Journal (ed. by James K. Hosmer) (New York, 1908), I, p. 110; compare BOSTON, First, CR PUB I, 15, 16, 41.

1. CR PUB I, vii, lists this as "Volume IV."

2. CR PUB I, vii, lists this as "Volume II."

3. CR PUB I, vii, lists this as "Volume III."

4. CR PUB I, vii, lists this as "Volume VI," printing the entries through 1867.

5. These three volumes, paginated continuously, are internally numbered as Vols. I, II, III, and are so cited in the thesis.

6. Some miscellaneous marriage records were published by Jeremiah Colburn, "Marriages in Boston, Mass. from the Original Certificates of the Clergymen Officiating," NEHGR, XXXIV (1880), 94-96 (covers 1707), and by Anson Titus, "Marriages of Rev. BOSTON, Second (U).

The church was gathered on June 5, 1650, and was popularly known as "The Old North Church" (not to be confused with the Episcopal church similarly designated). The Second

1. CR PUB I, vii-viii, lists this as "Volume V," and gives the following brief explanation: "The proprietors were the legal corporation of pew holders who owned the church buildings and managed the secular affairs of the church. Gradually, however, many of the proprietors of pews ceased to have any active connection with the parish and it became increasingly desirable that the control of the church property be exercised by a more responsible body. Accordingly, a board of five trustees was created and, on April 22, 1922, a majority of the pew owners conveyed their rights to five proprietors acting concurrently as trustees. By 1936 all the pews had been so transferred and the membership of the proprietors and trustees thereafter became identical. The Trustees, in addition to carrying the responsibilities of the pew proprietors, also act as successors to the elders and deacons in the holding and administering of charitable funds."

Church and Society of Boston was incorporated on Feb. 4, 1824.

Four mergers have occurred during the church's lifetime. In 1741-1742, a group of Old Light opponents of the revival, led by junior pastor Samuel Mather, seceded and constituted Boston's Tenth Church. In accordance with Mather's dying wish, the surviving members of the Tenth Church returned to the Second Church in 1785-1786.

During the siege of Boston, the Second Church's (second) meetinghouse was destroyed by the British. Following the war, in 1779 this congregation merged with that of the Seventh ("New Brick") Church, retaining the name of the Second ("Old North") Church.

In 1845, a merger was effected with the Church of the Saviour, the bodies being incorporated as The Second Church on Feb. 22 of that year.

In 1968, following a fire which destroyed the First Church's building, that body and this merged to form The First and Second Church of Boston.

The records are owned by the church and deposited with the Massachusetts Historical Society, Boston, unless otherwise noted.

Each of the total of eighty-nine books and boxes held by the Society has been assigned an Arabic numeral by church officials, and this is given in parentheses, following the code designation, in the case of each item cited below. It should be noted that Item 85 is the only extant book of early records of Boston's Arlington Street Church.

1. Raynsford was summarily dismissed from the diaconate of Boston's First Church in 1668/69 for his opposition to the settlement over that church of Rev. John Davenport, as was Deacon Jacob Eliot.

2. Described as "Captain" by Sewall, "Diary," cited in Hamilton A. Hill, History of the Old South Church (Third Church) Boston 1669-1884 (Boston and New York, 1890), II, p. 296. Apparently Williams received the title some time before 1694, but after election to the diaconate.

CR NARRATIVE YALE - "Third Church Narrative, 1667-1674," an account of the events 1667-1674 compiled ca. 1691 by a committee (Samuel Sewall, Jacob Eliot, Theophilus Frarye, Joshua Scottow) at the request of the church. The "Narrative" was evidently prepared in duplicate; Wisner's 1830 History of the Old South Church mentions finding two leaves among miscellaneous church papers. The Yale University Library copy, lacking only p. 1, was copied for Hamilton A. Hill during the winter of 1885-1886, and incorporated by him in his History, I, pp. 11-202 (see CR PUB). This MS owned and held by Yale University Library, as part of the Ezra Stiles papers; it now lacks pp. 1 and 87.

In first volume, "Preface," v-vi, Hill notes that his History contains a complete publishment of all church records and society records through 1821, and excerpts therefrom, 1821-1884. It should be noted however that Hill occasionally omits naming the subjects of disciplinary proceedings, and that he omits the vital statistics which were published elsewhere in 1883 (cf. VS PUB).

Miscellaneous church records: Church Committee Records, 1855-1897; records of a joint stock company organized by church members for charitable purposes, 1734-1771; records of the Union Church of Essex Street, which merged with Old South in 1920; financial records of the Berkley Temple and Berkley Street Society.

It is difficult to arrange the Society's books in chronological sequence, since there are three overlapping types of records: Society Records, books containing records of the Society and its Standing Committee, and records of the Standing Committee alone.

SR I - "Old South Church." This is the back of the book designated above as CR I. Subtitle: "This Book belongs to the South Church in Boston." Records of the church-and-congregation (Society), 1735-1767.

SR II - "Society's Minutes." Church-and-congregation records, 1768-1802.

S COM & SR III - "Votes Orders & Proceedings of the South Chh & Congregation In Marlborough Street Boston." Standing Committee records and some church-and-congregation (Society) votes, 1735-1819.

S COM & SR IV - Records of the Society and of the Standing Committee, 1787-1823.

S COM V - "Old South Records." Standing Committee records, 1824-1842.

S COM VIII - "Old South Society, Incorporated March 1845." (Flyleaf: "Records of Society 1867-1876.") Standing Committee records only, 1867-1876.

S COM IX - "Standing Committee, Old South Society." (Flyleaf: "Records of the Standing Committee of the Old South Society, Boston, Begun May 29th 1876. and ended October 8, 1896.")

SR/PROP X - "Records," "Old South Society, Incorporated March 1845." Records of pew proprietors, 1877-1896.

Miscellaneous society records: Pew Deeds, 1783-1860, 1820-1865, 1845-1877, 1876-1922; Pew Accounts, 1786-1808, 1810-1844, 1845-1865.

BOSTON, French Huguenot, extinct.

The church was gathered in 1686 by persons who migrated to America following the revocation in 1685 of the Edict of Nantes. The church building was sold to the congregation of Boston's Eleventh Church in 1748, and the surviving membership by 1764 had been absorbed into the other Boston churches.

Ministers:	Laurentius Van den Bosch	(ord. in the Church of England; sett. in Boston 1685 and rem. later that year; d. 1696)
	David de Bonrepos	(sett. 1686; rem. 1688; d. 1734)
	Ezechiel Carré	(sett. 1689; rem. 1691)
	Daniel Bondet	(ord. in the Church of England; sett. 1694; rem. 1696; d. 1722)
	Pierre Daillé	(sett. 1696; d. 1715)
	André Le Mercier	(sett. 1715; ministered to French families until d. 1764)

Only a few of the lay officers of the church are known. Mentioned in a land deed of 1704/05 are elders John Tartarien, Francis Bredon, Jean Dupuis [John Dupee], and John Portree. Elder Stephen Boutineau, after the dissolution of this church, became a member of Boston's Third Church, and served on committees there until his death in 1761.

No records of the church are extant. See A. Holmes, "Memoir of the French Protestants, who Settled at Oxford, Massachusetts, A.D. 1686; with a Sketch of the Entire History of the Protestants of France," MHSC, 3rd Ser., II (1830), 1-83; E. T. Fisher (trans.), Report of a French Protestant Refugee in Boston [1687-1688] (Brooklyn, 1868); Charles C. BOSTON, King's Chapel (U).

The Proprietors of King's Chapel organized on June 15, 1686. Although the church relinquished its connection with the Church of England about the time of the Revolutionary War, and adopted a revised prayer book embodying anti-Trinitarian sentiments in 1785, it retained a quasi-episcopalian form of government, so that it falls outside the realm of this study.

The records of King's Chapel are church property, and are deposited with the Massachusetts Historical Society, Boston. Copies of the vital statistics are held by the City Registrar, Boston. Of the several published histories available, the best-known is Henry Wilder Foote's three-volume Annals of King's Chapel from the Puritan Age to the Present Day (Boston, 1882, 1896, 1940).

BOSTON, Fourth (U), extinct.

The church was gathered on Dec. 12, 1698, and was variously known as the Brattle Street Church, the Brattle Square Church, and because of its publication in 1699 of a platform of practice differing from that of the other Puritan churches, was frequently referred to as "The Manifesto Church." The undertakers were originally organized in 1697, and the Proprietors of the Church in Brattle Square incorporated in 1822. In 1871, a new church building was erected, but proved financially so burdensome that in 1876 the building was sold, and church and society became extinct.

Ministers: Benjamin Colman, D.D. (ord. 1699 England; sett. here 1699; d. 1747)

The Deacon Storer who resigned his church office in 1773 was the son of Capt. Storer; from 1771 until his death in 1807, he also served as Treasurer of Harvard College.

BOSTON, Fifth (U), extinct.

The church was gathered on May 5, 1714 as the Fifth or New North Church, the latter name indicating its derivation from Boston's Second (Old North) Church. The Members of the New North Society were incorporated in 1803. In 1863, the Fifth Church and Society undertook to merge with Boston's Bulfinch-Street Church and Society, an action concluded with the dissolution of the Fifth Society in 1884, although the resulting merged church itself became extinct shortly thereafter.

1. Francis Parkman's A Survey of God's Providence in the Establishment of The Churches of New-England: A Sermon Delivered in Boston, November 27, 1814, on the Completion of a Century Since the Settlement of the New-North Church (Boston, 1814) claims Ruling Elder William Parkman was the last to be elected to that office in any of the Boston churches.

2. Ephraim Eliot's Historical Notices of the New North Religious Society in the Town of Boston, with Anecdotes of the Reverend Andrew and John Eliot &c. &c. (Boston, 1822) holds the first three deacons elected were Robert Comby, Edward Proctor and James Clark; however, as he notes, they were elected deacons of New North before being dismissed from Old North, a procedure sufficiently unusual so that Rev. Cotton Mather refused to grant the three dismissals. New North then elected its first deacons, Lyman and Barrett.

Unless otherwise noted, the records are owned and held by the City Clerk, Boston.

1. The phrase "Volume the Third" suggests that a now-lost volume was begun in 1805, when CR I's pages were filled, and discontinued when Rev. Parkman opened his pastorate in 1813.

BOSTON, Sixth (U), extinct.

The church was gathered on April 15, 1719 as the Sixth or New South Church. The Proprietors (frequently referred to in the records as "the Society") were incorporated in 1803.

The years 1866-1868 saw the Sixth Church merging with the Suffolk-Street Chapel and the Concord-Street Chapel, but the body thus formed did not long survive the merger.

Unless otherwise noted, the records are owned and held by the City Clerk, City Hall, Boston.

1. Samuel Checkley notes in CR I, p. 1: "N.B. Mr. Henry Hill was chosen by the Church unto y^e Deacon's office before my Call and Ordination."

2. Powning transferred his membership from Boston's Third Church to the Sixth in 1720, and probably served as a deacon here from the time of his admission.

BOSTON, Seventh (U), extinct.

The church was gathered on May 23, 1722 as the Seventh or New Brick Church, its Society having been organized in 1719 by persons seceding from Boston's Fifth Church. In 1779, following the destruction of the meetinghouse of Boston's Second Church by British troops, the Seventh and Second Churches merged into one, retaining the title of the older body.

BOSTON, Arlington Street Church (U).

The church was gathered in 1729 by Irish immigrants whose background prompted them to employ the presbyterian form of church government. The church was then popularly known as "the church of the Presbyterian Strangers," and (because of its location) "the Presbyterian Church in Long Lane."

In August of 1786, the church voted to adopt congregational polity, and in the following year settled the Arminian Jeremy Belknap as its minister, foreshadowing the gradual shift to a Unitarian theology.

The Proprietors of the Meeting House in Federal Street (as Long Lane was now named) were incorporated in 1805. In 1862, this body was reincorporated as the Proprietors of the Arlington Street Church (the present location).

Ministers:	John Moorhead	(sett. 1729; inst. 1730; d. 1773)
	Robert Annan	(inst. 1783; dism. 1786; rem. to Pa.)
	Jeremy Belknap, D.D.	(inst. 1787; d. 1798)
	John S. Popkin	(ord. 1799; dism. 1802; d. 1852)
	William Ellery Channing, S.T.D.	(ord. 1803; d. 1842)

Ruling elders: the church employed such officers during its presbyterian phase, but due to the scarcity of early records, their names are unknown.

Deacons: again, the records for the presbyterian period are of no help. The names of three deacons for the congregational period are known:

William McNeil	(m. 1786)
Francis Wright	(m. 1786-1808)
Henry Hunter	(e. 1794; d. 1808)

When the Rev. John Moorhead died in 1773, three members of the congregation took over the management of the church and society affairs. Because they proceeded in a somewhat high-handed manner, on April 5, 1774, they were impeached by the Proprietors, and dismissed from their trust. One of the three, William McAlpine, refused to relinquish the records, taking them with him to Halifax, Nova Scotia, and thence to Glasgow, Scotland where he died in 1788. These records are presumed lost.¹

The extant records, unless otherwise noted, are owned by the church and deposited with the Massachusetts Historical Society, Boston.

BOSTON, Tenth (C), extinct.

The church was gathered on May 9, 1742 by Old Lights who separated from Boston's Second Church. It was generally known as "Samuel Mather's Church," Mather being its first and only minister. On his death in 1785, in accordance with his dying wish, the surviving members of the Tenth Church reunited with the Second Church.

Minister: Samuel Mather, D.D. (inst. 1742; d. 1785)

Ruling elders and deacons: there being virtually no extant records,¹ very little is known of the Tenth Church's lay officers. The records of Boston's Second Church report that one Benjamin Henderson served as a deacon in the Tenth Church, that in 1786 he transferred his membership to the Second Church, and served as a deacon there until 1799. The Diary of William Bentley, D.D., Pastor of the East Church, Salem, Massachusetts (rep. Gloucester, Mass., 1962), III, p. 7 mentions a Deacon Joseph Roby of the Tenth Church. See also Justin Winsor (ed.), The Memorial History of Boston, including Suffolk County, Massachusetts, 1630-1880 (Boston, 1880-1), II, 227ff.

BOSTON, Eleventh (C), extinct.

The church was gathered on Feb. 17, 1748 by New Lights separating from the several Boston congregations, and was popularly known as "The School Street Church," and "The Rev. Andrew Croswell's Church." It disbanded soon after Croswell's death in 1785.²

1. Some miscellaneous marriage records were published by Jeremiah Colburn, "Marriages in Boston, Mass. from the Original Certificates of the Clergymen Officiating," NEHGR, XXXIV (1880), 94-96 (covers 1743).

2. The building was sold to the Roman Catholic community in Boston, and so became the first church building to be used by members of that faith in New England.

Minister: Andrew Croswell (inst. 1748; d. 1785)

Ruling elders and deacons: there being no extant records, virtually nothing is known of the Eleventh Church's lay officers. Croswell himself published A Narrative of the Founding and Settling The New-gathered Congregational Church in Boston (Boston, 1749), which indicates that the church employed deacons, but not ruling elders. See also Justin Winsor (ed.), The Memorial History of Boston, including Suffolk County, Massachusetts, 1630-1880 (Boston, 1880-1), II, pp. 236ff.; and C. C. BOSTON, Brighton, First (U), inactive.

The church was gathered on Feb. 23, 1783¹ as the Church in the Third (South) Precinct in Cambridge. The precinct had been incorporated in 1779, and eventually became known as the Third Parish. When the area became recognized as the town of Brighton,² the church and parish were renamed the First Church (1807) and Parish (March 1839) of Brighton.

Minister: John Foster (ord. 1784; res. 1827; d. 1829)

1. Some authorities date the church's existence from 1734-1737 (see Emil Oberholzer, Delinquent Saints [New York, 1956], p. 355; Frederick L. Weis, The Colonial Clergy and The Colonial Churches of New England [Lancaster, Mass., 1936], p. 243). But this is to confuse the inauguration of occasional "winter-preaching" at Brighton in 1734-1735, the building of a meetinghouse, and the beginning of year-round preaching in 1744, with the formal gathering of the church in 1783. See Lucius R. Paige, History of Cambridge, Massachusetts, 1630-1877 (Boston, 1877), p. 295.

2. Brighton was made a town in 1807 and annexed to Boston in 1874.

Ruling elders and deacons: the earliest records make no mention of the church's lay officers.

There are no extant records antedating 1828. The later records are owned by the church, and held by the Historical Library, Unitarian Universalist Association, Boston.

Also MISSING from the collection of church records are the following books of records described by CR I PUB HUNNEWELL, pp. 167-168: "The Deacon's Book, 1671," containing diaconal accounts and other records, 1671-1806; two "Day Books, 1693 and 1767," containing miscellaneous prudential records. It is thought that these items may still be extant, although their present location is unknown.

2. Before emigrating to Massachusetts, the personnel of what became the Dorchester church met at the New Hospital, Plymouth, England, and sufficiently organized themselves to permit their designating Maverick and Warham as the church's eventual ministers. number of the church's members accompanied the junior minister, John Warham, to Windsor, Ct., but it is uncertain whether they removed as a church organization or simply as a company of persons heretofore members of the Dorchester church. Those who remained at Dorchester, together with persons newly arrived from England, deemed it necessary or fitting to reorganize themselves. On Aug. 23, 1636, a written covenant (the church's first ?) was subscribed, and the₁ church reconstituted under the ministry of Richard Mather.

The First Parish in Dorchester was organized in 1807, and the Trustees of the Parish received incorporation in 1831.

1. The records are ambiguous concerning which "Deacon Daniel Preston" was actually the one elevated to the ruling eldership. We believe that it was Deacon Daniel Preston, Jr.

The records list an "Elder John Wiswall" among the signers of the 1636 covenant. Wiswall served as a deacon at Dorchester, but his eldership was served at Boston First.

Tradition holds that Roger Williams, John Eliot, Thomas Mayhew, Jr. and William Leverich all preached to the Indians at Comassakumkanet (Herring Pond or Ponds) between 1631 and 1653. The first regular ministry appears to have been that of Capt. Thomas Tupper, a missionary venture begun in 1658.

Since Eliot's 1670 list of Indian churches makes no mention of Herring Pond(s), it is usually assumed that formal organization of the Indian church took place after Eliot wrote, but before Tupper's death in 1675/76. The meeting-house, financed by Judge Samuel Sewall, was erected in 1689-1691.

The church probably became extinct with the death of the last of the missionary Tupperes, Elisha, in 1787. However, the remnants of the Christian Indian community received the ministrations of Indian and white preachers as late as 1849.

The Herring Pond(s) area lies partly in Plymouth and partly in the Sagamore section of Bourne (and was once part of Sandwich Second Precinct).

For detailed information on all the Indian praying towns and churches, see Frederick L. Weis, "The New England Company of 1649 and its Missionary Enterprises," CSMP, XXXVIII (1947-1951), 134-218, and William Kellaway, The New England Company, 1649-1776 (London, 1961). Kellaway reports on the company's publications, described earlier by George P. Winship, The Eliot Indian Tracts (Cambridge, 1925). Among the seventeenth century items used in preparing the present inventory of churches and their personnel, mention should be made of John Eliot's A Brief Narrative of the Progress of the Gospel amongst the Indians in New-England in the year 1670 (1671, rep. Boston, 1868), and the 1698 report of Rawson and Danforth, published by Cotton Mather et alii as A Letter about the Present State of Christianity among the Christianized Indians of New England (Boston, 1705) (reprinted as "Account of an Indian Visitation," MHSC, 1st Ser., X (1809, rep. 1857), 129-134).

Ministers: Capt. Thomas Tupper	(prob. not ord.; tended the Indian mission at Herring Pond 1658-d. 1675/76; also helped supply Sandwich First the last two years of his life)
John Cotton, Jr.	(Indian mission on the Vineyard 1664-1667; ord. Plymouth First 1669, also ministered to two dozen "praying Indian" towns and churches; rem. 1697; d. 1699)

Charles of Mannamit	(Indian preacher, active here and at praying towns in Bourne [Mannamit] and Wareham [Weweantic] 1674-1685)
Capt. Thomas Tupper, Jr.	(prob. not ord.; served at Herring Pond 1676-d. 1706)
Rowland Cotton	(ord. Sandwich First 1694, ministered to six Indian praying towns and churches; d. 1721/22)
Ralph Jones	(Indian preacher, 1698)
Jacob Hedge	(Indian preacher, also associated with praying town at Plymouth [Manomet Ponds] 1698-1709)
Eldad Tupper	(prob. not ord.; grandson and son of the Captains Tupper, and like them a member of Sandwich First; helped organize Sandwich Second 1734; ministered here 1706-d. 1750)
Josiah Cotton	(ministered to a half dozen Indian praying towns and churches 1707-d. 1744)
Solomon Briant	(Indian preacher, also associated with Bourne [Mannamit], Mashpee, Orleans [Potanumaquut], Yarmouth [Matakees] 1720-d. 1775)
Elisha Tupper	(son of Eldad; prob. ord.; served four Indian praying towns and churches 1739-d. 1787)

Gideon Hawley	(ord. 1754 to Indian mission field; inst. Mashpee 1758; d. 1807; associated with eleven Indian praying towns and churches)
Isaac Jeffrey	(Indian preacher, also associated with Bourne [Mannamit], Bourne [Pocasset], Plymouth [Manomet Ponds] 1767-1770)
Duncan Ingraham	(missionary 1774-1779)
Phinehas Fish	(ord. Mashpee 1812; rem. 1840; d. 1854; also associated here)

As is the case with all of the Indian churches except Natick, no records of this church are known to exist or even to have been kept.

BOURNE, Pocasset (Pokesit) Indian Church (C), extinct.

The praying town at Pocasset came into being about 1675. If a church was formally gathered here, it is likely that its organization was guided by Benjamin Fessenden, ca. 1725. The death of the last of the missionary Tupper in 1787 was accompanied by the disintegration of the community.¹

See the bibliography on Indian churches, given under BOURNE, Herring Pond(s) Indian Church.

Joseph Briant	(Indian preacher, active here and at Mashpee and Orleans [Potanumaquut] from 1725; ord. Orleans [Potanumaquut] 1758; d. 1759-1760)
Joseph Bourne	(ord. Mashpee 1729, also ministered to seven "praying Indian" towns and churches; d. 1767)
Joseph Papenah	(Indian preacher, also associated with Falmouth [Succonesit] 1758-1762)
Gideon Hawley	(ord. 1754 to Indian mission field; inst. Mashpee 1758; d. 1807; associated with eleven Indian praying towns and churches)
Elisha Tupper	(prob. ord.; served four Indian praying towns and churches 1739-d. 1787)

[BOURNE, Monument (C), extinct.]

Because Pocasset was incorporated (as the Second Precinct of Sandwich) in 1772, it is sometimes assumed that church organization among the English residents dates from that year. However, Monument Church was actually gathered in 1833.

BOXBORO (Univ.), extinct.

The church was gathered on April 29, 1784, the Society having been organized in 1775. The majority of the church members withdrew in 1829 to form an orthodox society and church. The old Society continued to sponsor occasional services under Universalist auspices until 1842. In 1870, with the sale of the meetinghouse to the town, the old Society ceased to exist.

BOXFORD, Second (see Boxford, West).

BOYLSTON, First (C).

The church was gathered on Oct. 6, 1743 as the Church of the Second or North Precinct in Shrewsbury. When the precinct became a town in 1786, the First Parish of Boylston was organized, and the church accordingly changed its name. During the pastorate of Arminian minister Ward Cotton, antagonism between his adherents and the orthodox led to a series of ecclesiastical councils, the last of which in 1825 dismissed him from the pastorate on behalf of the orthodox church members. Cotton continued at Boylston, preaching at private homes and in the town hall, and a Unitarian church and society (1834) were organized.

1. Some scraps of information are contained in "Items from an Interleaved Copy of Ames's Almanac for 1746, belonging to Rev. John Cushing," NEHGR, XIX (1865), 237-241; rep. in EA, IV (1900), 155-156.

After Cotton's departure, this venture drifted into Universalism, and finally became extinct. Its records have disappeared. The orthodox church of the First Parish continues in existence today.¹

In 1708 old Braintree was divided into duly incorporated precincts, the North (Quincy) and the South (Braintree, sometimes called "Monatiquot"). When Quincy was set off as a town in 1792, the 1707 church was duly designated The First Church in Braintree.

It is in the hands of the Rev. Samuel Niles of Abington [Ct.], and will probably be continued in his family, where, if need be, it may be consulted at any time, with freedom."

A. Morse, writing more than a half century later in "Record of Rev. Samuel Niles," NEHGR, VII (1854), 225, speaks of Niles' "aged daughters" living in their father's house, and still possessing the Niles' record book. No further mention has ever been made of the volume's existence.

BROCKTON, First (C).

Old Bridgewater, incorporated as a town in 1656, was divided into northern and southern precincts in 1712. The North Precinct was divided into the East and West Precincts in 1723. In 1738, a part of the West Precinct was incorporated as the North Precinct in Bridgewater, and it was this area which became the town of Brockton in 1874. The church was gathered on Sept. 18, 1740 as the Fourth Church in Bridgewater. When the area became known as North Bridgewater, the church became the First Church and the First Parish in North Bridgewater was incorporated in 1823. The change of names to that of First Church and First Parish in Brockton came in 1874.

BROOKFIELD, First (U).

The facts concerning the origins of the present Brookfield and West Brookfield churches have been sufficiently misrepresented to warrant detailed treatment here.¹

Old Brookfield was incorporated as a town in 1673, and its church was gathered in 1717, the latter event being delayed that long by recurrent troubles with the Indians. In 1750, a Second (or North) Precinct was set off, and a (second) church gathered there in 1752. (In 1812, this Second Precinct would be incorporated as the town of North Brookfield; the 1752 church is so listed in this inventory.)

Meanwhile, troubles were brewing in the First (or old) Precinct of Brookfield over the location of the meetinghouse. The old meetinghouse had been situated at Foster's Hill in the western part of the old precinct (viz., in what today is the town of West Brookfield). In 1753, personnel from the southern part of the old precinct began razing the old building with an eye to replacing it with a new edifice on Brookfield Common (viz., in what today is the town of Brookfield). The Foster's Hill group appealed to the General Court, and that august body intervened.

By order of the Court (Nov. 8, 1754), the old (or First) precinct was divided into two parts. The new (western) precinct was to retain the name and powers of the First Precinct of Brookfield, - although when incorporated as a town in 1848, it was given the town name, "West Brookfield!" The new (southern) precinct was denominated the Third Precinct; when the Second Precinct achieved townhood in 1812, the Third became the Second Precinct. To complete the confusion, with the incorporation of the First Precinct in 1848 as the town of West Brookfield, the now-Second Precinct inherited the ancient, uncluttered name of "Brookfield."

The church in this Third/Second Precinct was finally gathered de novo on April 15, 1756, and it is with this church that we now have to do, that is, the church in the modern town of

1. A flyleaf memorandum reads: "The Records of Brookline Church, before the ministry of the Rev. Joseph Jackson, were but imperfectly kept. All the proceedings of the Church, which were recorded by the Rev. James Allen, the first minister, are comprised within one page! This account of Baptisms is known to be incomplete. Nor is it certain, that he recorded all the admissions to the Church, during his ministry. Of marriages and deaths he left no information This negligence is moreover to be deplored, as it set an example, which was too faithfully followed by the second and third pastors of Brookline Church." The present volume was begun by John Pierce, who collected all the extant data of former pastorates and set it down as a preface to his own account.

BURLINGTON (C).

The church was gathered on Oct. 29, 1735 as the Second Church of Christ in Woburn. The Second Precinct in Woburn had been incorporated in 1730. When in 1799 the area was organized as the town of Burlington, church and parish accordingly changed their titles.

1. The church experienced considerable difficulty in settling deacons. The 1791 election named five persons to the diaconate, all of whom refused to accept ordination in 1793; finally, in the latter year, two of the five changed their minds. Timothy Winn
David Blanchard
David Blanchard, Jr.

BYFIELD (C).

Although Byfield is not a town, its history is sufficiently complicated to warrant an entry under this name. The area was originally known by its Indian name, "Quascacunquen" or The Falls (later, Newbury Falls). Comprising the western portions of modern Rowley and Newbury, one of its earliest English names combined elements of both words in the name "Rowlbury Parish" (sometimes miswritten "Rowlberry").

Settling the area by 1702, two years later the residents agreed on the name "Byfield," in honor of a Bostonian who donated a bell for the meetinghouse. Byfield Precinct was organized in 1704, and incorporated in 1710. Whether the church was gathered on Feb. 24, 1704 or at the ordination of the first minister, Nov. 17, 1706, is uncertain.¹

In 1838, almost half of the Byfield area was annexed to New Rowley,² incorporated in that year as the town of Georgetown.² The present location of the church is in Rowley.

The Proprietors of the Ministerial Fund in the Parish of Byfield were incorporated in 1812, and the Proprietors of the Meeting House in 1834.

A New Light separation in 1744 did not produce a Separate church at Byfield.³ A Presbyterian separation that saw the gathering of a Presbyterian church in 1796 was similarly short-lived, the dissidents returning to the old parish church by 1805.

CAMBRIDGE, First Parish and Church (U).
First Church (C).

A church was gathered at Cambridge (then called Newtown) on or shortly before Oct. 11, 1633. Three years later, the pastor, the teacher, and many of the church members removed to Hartford, Ct., establishing themselves there. Those who remained at Cambridge, together with newcomers, gathered a new church on Feb. 1, 1635/36.¹ In 1733, following the incorporation of a Second (Menotomy) Precinct, - now the town of Arlington, - by the General Court, the part of Cambridge not so set off, namely, "the southeasterly part," was organized as the First Precinct (later, First Parish) of the town of Cambridge. Separation into Unitarian and Trinitarian bodies came in the year 1829. The Trustees of the Ministerial Fund in the First Parish in Cambridge, continuing under Unitarian auspices, had been incorporated in 1818. The Shepard Congregational Society, representing the orthodox, was incorporated in 1829.

1. Embedded in the considerable literature claiming for each of the present churches the right to the title of "First Church," are occasional attempts to date the present bodies from 1633.

CAMBRIDGE, Separate (C/B), extinct.

The church appears to have been gathered at the time of its pastor's ordination, April 24, 1751. Whether it had a distinctly congregational phase before identifying completely with the Baptist tradition is not known. It was still in existence in 1784, but had disappeared from the scene by 1817, when the First Baptist Church was organized.

Minister: Nathaniel Draper (ord. 1751; rem. 1753; d. 1767)

Neither records nor secondary information regarding the lay officers of this church are extant. See C. C. Goen, Revivalism and Separatism in New England, 1740-1800 (New Haven and London, 1962), pp. 97-98, 312.

CANTON, First Congregational Parish (U).

The church was gathered on Oct. 13, 1717 as the Church in the South Precinct of Dorchester, the area having been so incorporated in 1715. When this precinct was annexed to Stoughton in 1736, the church's name was duly changed and its parish incorporated as the First in Stoughton. In 1797 the area involved became the town of Canton, the church took the new title, and in 1820 its parish was re-incorporated as the First Congregational Parish. The Trustees of the Ministerial Fund were incorporated in 1825.

1. Despite the church's abandonment of the ruling elder-ship in 1727, Hewins retained the title. Cf. CANTON FIRST, CR I, 37, under date of 1732: "This day was in-terred Elder Hewins's wife"

CAPE LANDS, Parish (see Rockport).

CARLISLE, First Religious Society (U).

The church was gathered on Feb. 28, 1781.² The First Religious Society was incorporated in 1832, after the withdrawal of the orthodox members of the church.

Minister: Paul Litchfield (ord. 1781; d. 1827)

Ruling elders: none.

1. See Daniel T. V. Hunton, History of the Town of Canton, Norfolk County, Massachusetts (Cambridge, 1893), pp. 508-509.

2. Sometimes 1758 is given as the date of the church's gathering, but this is the year of the erection of the meetinghouse.

Deacons: due to the sparsity of early records, very little is known about the members of the diaconate. A John Robbins is mentioned as a deacon-elect in 1781, and the same man (or possibly another of the same name) spoken of as a deacon in 1810 and again in 1819. One Ephraim Robbins is mentioned as a deacon (possibly of another church) in 1781; he died in 1820. John Green and John Jacobs, mentioned as deacons in 1827 and the latter one of the founders of the orthodox church, may well have been elected after 1805. Green died in 1858, Jacobs in 1827.

The extant records are owned and held by the church.

Mention should also be made of the Wilkins notebooks owned and held by the town library. Mrs. Benson P. Wilkins in 1936 completed some twenty-five MS notebooks on the history of the town, the fourth containing information concerning the religious history of Carlisle. In 1943 Ruth C. Wilkins added five MS notebooks entitled "History of The First Religious Society The First Parish Church Carlisle, Mass. 1780-1943."

1. Ruth C. Wilkins, op. cit., Vol. XXVI, pp. 16, 20, records the tradition that at the time of the separation of the orthodox in 1828-1829, CR I was for a time retained by that wing of the church. Forced by law to return the records to the church of the parish, someone among the orthodox party first cut away all but the first twenty pages of the book. Neither the Wilkinses nor town historian Sidney A. Bull who published in 1920 indicate any knowledge of the contents of the missing pages.

CARVER, First (C).

The church was gathered on May 13, 1733 as the South Church in Plympton, the Proprietors of the Meeting House having been incorporated in 1731. In 1790, the area (frequently called "Lakenham") was set off as the town of Carver, and the following year, the First Congregational Parish in (North) Carver was organized. The church is still sometimes designated the North Carver Calvinistic Congregational Church.

A separation centering in the south part of the town occurred in 1771, and may have contributed to the formation of a Baptist church there twenty years later.¹

rem. 1746; d. 1778)
John Howland (ord. 1746; d. 1804)

Ruling elders and deacons: due to the lack of early records, only partial information is available concerning the church's lay officers. It appears unlikely that the church ever employed ruling elders. The following deacons are mentioned in the extant precinct records:

James Shaw	(m. 1741)
Joseph Lucas	(m. 1741; d. 1742)
Joseph Bridgeham	(m. 1743)
Abel Crocker	(m. 1751-1752)

Salvenus Dunham	(m. 1753-1771) ²
Thomas Savery	(m. 1779-1799) ²

CHAPPAQUIDDICK Indian Church (see Edgartown, Chappaquiddick Indian Church).

CHARLEMONT, First (C), extinct.

The church was gathered in 1767, probably during September. In 1785, that part of the town on which the meetinghouse stood was annexed to the newly created town of Heath, and the church was disbanded.²

1. A partial list of church members, 1746-1913, is supplied by Griffith, op. cit., pp. 307-315.

2. One tradition has it that the disbanding of the church, and indeed the annexation of land to Heath, were parts of a complicated plot to remove Rev. Leavitt from the ministry of the two towns. If true, this would explain the somewhat unusual tactic of dissolving the church and creating a new church in each of the towns.

Minister: Jonathan Leavitt (inst. 1767; dism. 1785;
d. 1802)

Ruling elders and deacons: it was noted in 1889 that no records of this church had survived,¹ so that there is almost no information extant regarding its lay officers. The records of the present Charlemont First Church suggest that Aaron Rice may have been a deacon of the extinct church.²

See William H. Leavitt, A Sketch of the Life and Character of Rev. Jonathan Leavitt, the First Minister of Charlemont, Mass. (n.p., 1903).

CHARLEMONT, First, Federated (C).

The church was gathered on June 6, 1788. In 1823, the minister led a Unitarian separation, forming a church and society which eventually disbanded in 1887. The orthodox retained control of the original church and society, and in recent years have federated with local Methodist and Baptist groups.

CHARLTON, Federated (C).

The church was gathered on April 16, 1761, the parish being organized three days later and receiving incorporation in 1784. In 1798 the latter body was succeeded by the duly-incorporated Proprietors of the New Congregational Centre Meeting House, which organization was in turn replaced in 1826 by the First Calvinistic Congregational Society. The church itself was incorporated in 1872.

1. Deacon Aaron Lyman of Belchertown was received into membership at Charlemont in 1804. Although not elected to the diaconate here until 1812, he probably served in that capacity from the time of his admission.

A short-lived (1827-1831) Unitarian separation has led some authorities to regard the original Charlton church as extinct; however, the Unitarian contingent carried neither the church nor the related prudential body with them.¹ The orthodox retained control of both, and in recent years have federated with local Universalists.

The church was gathered on June 15, 1720, and received incorporation in 1798. 1. Because he confused the church organization with that of the parish, Robert T. Swan reported two successive churches at Chatham. See his "Tenth Report on the Custody and Condition of the Public Records of Parishes, Towns, and Counties (Public Document No. 52), Public Documents of Massachusetts . . . for the Year 1897 (Boston, 1898), II, 40, 160.

	Ephraim Briggs	(ord. 1796; d. 1816)

Ruling elders and deacons: due to the lack of early records, it is not known if Chatham employed ruling elders, but it appears doubtful that it did. Smith, op. cit., p. 28, supplies the names of some early deacons:

Thomas Atkins	(the church's first deacon)
Samuel Taylor
Stephen Smith
Paul Crowell

Nathan Bassett	(m. 1744 in Town Records)
John Hawes

2. Most authorities preface the list of ministers with the names of five men who ministered at Chatham previous to the church's gathering. Jonathan Vickery served here from 1696-1699 until his death in 1702. Gershom Hall ministered from 1703 until his removal in 1706; he died in 1732. Neither Vickery nor Hall could be settled, since they were not college-trained. John Latimer arrived in 1707, removed in 1709, and died in 1713. Matthew Short served briefly in 1710; he died in 1731. Hugh Adams ministered from 1711 until his dismissal by the town in 1715, and Hall again filled the vacancy until 1718. The Library, however, states that these documents disappeared many years ago.

Ruling elders: the church apparently considered employing ruling elders in 1660, but there is no record that such were ever elected. See CHELMSFORD FIRST, CR I FISKE, pp. 59-60 (COPY, pp. 247-248).

Deacons: upon arrival at Chelmsford, the church was undecided as to whether or not two deacons elected probationally at Wenham still stood in that capacity in the new church. These deacons, Reade and Kempe, elected in 1644 and 1655, respectively, appear to have resigned their office preparatory to the move to Chelmsford; for several years thereafter, their status was a matter of debate in the church.

C. C. Goen, Revivalism and Separatism in New England, 1740-1800 (New Haven and London, 1962), pp. 205, 313, holds that prior to 1743, some Chelmsford Separates worshipped at Concord, and that from 1743 to about 1758, they comprised a Separate church at Chelmsford under the ministry of Samuel Hyde. By 1772, the surviving Separates had all returned to the parish church. However, no trace of such a church has been found at Chelmsford, and it may be that persons so-minded simply enjoyed Hyde's evangelism without ever proceeding to church organization. CHICOPEE, First (C).

The Chicopee area was organized as the Fifth or North Parish in Springfield in 1750. By Sept. 27, 1752, when the church was gathered, parish lines had been redrawn so that the parish was then known as the Second Parish in Springfield. In 1848 the parish was incorporated as the town of Chicopee, the church becoming the First. The First Congregational Society was organized in 1850, and incorporated in 1873.

Minister: John McKinstry, Jr. (ord. 1752; d. 1813)

Ruling elders: none.

Deacons:	Benjamin Chapin	(e. 1752; d. 1756)
	David Chapin	(e. 1752; d. 1772)
	Samuel Cooper
	Edward Chapin	(e. 1773; d. 1800)

After having been lost for a quarter-century, some (perhaps all) of the records have been located at the public library in Springfield. Church officers are currently negotiating for the return of these documents to the church. Not yet located, but thought to be at the library are the first two or three volumes of church records, 1752-1839, 1839-1903. Already returned to the church are:

PR I - Parish Records, 1751-1850/1885.

PR I DUP - Parish Records, 1751-1757. Duplicate record.

CHILMARK, Nashuakemmuck Indian Church (C), extinct.

Located some six miles from Edgartown, Nashuakemmuck was the site of a praying town by 1651, and its church was gathered in 1674. It became extinct some time after 1784. During its phase as a praying town, the community was ministered to by Thomas Mayhew, Sr., and the Indian preachers Momonequem (ca. 1651), Panupuhquah (d. 1664), and John Tackanash (ord. teacher of Oak Bluffs' Sanchacantacket Indian Church 1670; d. 1684).

See the bibliography on Indian churches, given under BOURNE, Herring Pond(s) Indian Church, especially the 1670 report of John Cotton, Jr., the 1698 Rawson-Danforth report, and the studies of the New England Company by Weis and by Kellaway.

Ministers:	John Mayhew	(sett. West Tisbury 1673, associated with six Indian praying towns and churches; d. 1688/89)
	Janawannit	(Indian preacher; d. 1686)

Japeth (Pamc)hannit ¹	(Indian preacher, sett. Gay Head Indian Congregational Church 1693; also served here and Oak Bluffs [Sanchacantacket]; d. 1712)
William Lay (Panunnut)	(Indian preacher, younger brother of Panupuhquah; d. 1690)
Stephen Tackamason	(Indian preacher here and Chilmark [Seconchgut]; from 1702 also served Gay Head Indian Baptist Church; d. 1708)
Experience Mayhew	(Indian mission on the Vineyard 1692-d. 1758; associated with nine Indian praying towns and churches)
Josiah Torrey	(ord. West Tisbury 1704, associated with four Indian praying towns and churches; d. 1723)
Abel	(Indian ruling elder; elected preacher 1712 in succession to Japeth (Pamc)hannit; d. 1713)
Nathaniel Hancock	(ord. West Tisbury 1727, associated with three Indian praying towns and churches; dism. 1756; d. 1774)
Zachariah Mayhew	(ord. Chilmark 1767, associated with six Indian praying towns and churches; d. 1806)

Ruling elder: Abel (Indian ruling elder e. ca. 1698; elev. to preacher 1712; d. 1713)²

1. Sometimes given as "Japeth Hannit, Jr."

2. Reported in 1698 as preaching "to a part of the church, living at too great a distance ordinarily to attend Japet's ministry; although they come together to attend church administrations." "Account of an Indian visitation," MHSC, 1st Ser., X (1809, rep. 1857), 129-134.

As is the case with all of the Indian churches except Natick, no records of this church are known to exist or even to have been kept.

CHILMARK, Seconchgut Praying Town (and Indian Church ?)
(C), extinct.

Whether or not a church was gathered in this praying town is uncertain, although the Rawson-Danforth report of 1698 would seem so to indicate. The period of greatest activity seems to have been from 1698 to 1718. See the bibliography on Indian churches, given under BOURNE, Herring Pond(s) Indian Church.

Ministers:	Janawannit	(Indian preacher, d. 1686)
	Stephen Tackamason	(Indian preacher here and Chilmark [Nashuakemmuck] 1690; from 1702 also served Gay Head Indian Baptist Church; d. 1708)
	Stephen Shohkow	(Indian preacher, also served West Tisbury [Christiantown]; d. 1713)
	Daniel Shohkow	(Indian preacher, also served Gay Head Indian Congregational Church and praying towns on the Elizabeth Islands; d. 1718)
	Eliab Coshomon	(Indian preacher, m. 1724)

As is the case with all of the Indian churches except Natick, no records of this church are known to exist or even to have been kept.

CHILMARK (C), extinct.

The church was probably gathered in 1715, although some authorities claim the year to have been 1700. By 1877, it had become largely inactive, and was legally dissolved by 1893.

During the years prior to its (probable) gathering, the church's constituency was ministered to by John Mayhew (sett. West Tisbury 1673; d. 1689) and Ralph Thacher (sett. 1697 [ord. ?]; rem. 1714).

Ministers:	William Homes	(ord. abroad as Presbyterian 1692; ord. Chilmark 1715; d. 1746)
	Andrew Boardman	(ord. 1746; d. 1776)
	Timothy Fuller	(sett. 1776-1778; rem. 1782; d. 1805)
	Jonathan Smith	(ord. 1788; dism. 1827; d. 1829)

Ruling elders: none known.

Deacons: information is fragmentary, but the following names are known:

James Skiffe	(m. 1719)
Simon Mayhew	(d. 1753)
Timothy Mayhew	(d. 1781)
James Allen	(m. 1788; d. 1815)
Nathan Mayhew	(e. 1788; d. 1791)
Reuben Tilton	(m. 1791; d. ca. 1810)

The church records antedating 1787, except for such items as are contained in the Diary of Rev. William Homes, have long been lost. The Diary is owned and held by the Maine Historical Society, Portland, Me. Records for the years 1787-1877 have disappeared since 1905.

COLD SPRING, Church (see Belchertown).

COLRAIN (C).

The church was gathered under Presbyterian auspices late in 1750, when the Boston Presbytery authorized a Pelham minister to ordain elders at Colrain. Between 1780 and 1795, there were several Baptist separations from the church. On Dec. 9, 1819, the church voted to adopt Congregational principles.

Ministers:	Alexander McDowell	(ord. 1753; disp. 1761; d. 1761-1762)
	Daniel McClellen	(ord. 1769; d. 1773)
	Samuel Taggart	(sett. 1777; disp. 1818- 1819; d. 1825)

Ruling elders and deacons: because of the lack of records, only a few names are known, all of them deacons.

CONCORD, First Parish (U).

The church was gathered on July 5, 1636, the parish having been organized the previous year. The Trustees of the Congregational Ministerial Fund were incorporated in 1813, and the parish reorganized in 1826.

A separation in 1745 led to the founding of Concord's Second or West Church, the surviving members of which were absorbed by the church of the town by 1765.

Ministers:	Peter Bulkeley	(ord. teacher 1637; d. 1659)
	John Jones	(ord. pastor 1637; rem. 1644; d. 1665)
	Edward Bulkeley	(sett. 1659; d. 1694)

CONCORD, Second (C), extinct.

The church was gathered on Dec. 12, 1745 by persons dissatisfied with the New Light activities of Rev. Daniel Bliss of the First Church and Parish. Styling themselves the Second or West Church, these Old Light Separates came also to be known as "The Black Horse Church" by reason of their being forced to meet in the tavern of that name, all public buildings being closed to them. With the death of their minister, the members were gradually reabsorbed into the older church, a process completed about 1765.¹

Minister: John Whiting (ord. Concord First Church 1712; dism. 1737; served Concord Second from 1745; d. 1752)

Ruling elders and deacons: in the absence of any records, the only name that has survived is that of Samuel Miles who resigned his deaconship at Concord First Church in 1745 to join the Separates.

DANE STREET Church and Society (see Beverly).

DANVERS, First (C).

The church was gathered on Nov. 19, 1689 as the Church at Salem Village (The Farms).¹ The First Parish in Salem Village had been incorporated in 1672. When the area became the town of Danvers in 1752, the title of the church was accordingly changed, and the parish became known as the First or North Parish in Danvers. In 1838 the First Religious Society was incorporated; the church itself was incorporated in 1890 and again in 1932. The church had a proto-existence from 1671, being ministered to by James Bailey (ord. 1671; rem. 1680; d. 1707), George Burroughs (ord. 1680; rem. 1683; resett. 1690; d. 1692), and Deodat Lawson (sett. 1683; rem. 1688; d. post 1698), all of whom were actually "stated supplies."

1. The fact of Bailey and Burroughs' ordinations has led some authorities wrongly to believe that the church was gathered in 1671-1672. See Frederick L. Weis, The Colonial Clergy and The Colonial Churches of New England (Lancaster, Mass., 1936), pp. 24-25, 47, 124, 246.

Ministers:	Samuel Parris	(ord. 1689; res. 1696; d. 1719/20)
	George Burroughs	(resett. 1690; d. 1692, executed for witchcraft)

	Peter Clark	(ord. 1717; d. 1768)
	Benjamin Wadsworth, D.D.	(ord. 1772; d. 1826)

Ruling elders: none.

Deacons: prior to the gathering of the church, as early as 1679 the town annually "supplied the place of Deacons" with men who were charged to manage religious prudential concerns, another indication that the community did not regard the church as properly gathered until 1689. The names of these town-elected "deacons" were Thomas Putnam and Jonathan Walcott (e. 1680, 1681, 1682); Putnam and Nathaniel Ingersoll (e. 1684/85); Ingersoll and Walcott (e. 1687). DARTMOUTH, Nekkeh-kummees Indian Church (C), extinct.

Nekkeh-kummees was the site of a praying town ca. 1669, and its church was gathered ca. 1690. It appears to have become extinct ca. 1730.

During its phase as a praying town, the community was ministered to by John Cotton, Jr., missionary to the Vineyard Indians who was ordained pastor of Plymouth's First Church in 1669, and the Indian preacher Japeth Hannit, Sr. (1670-cta. 1695).

See the bibliography on Indian churches, given under BOURNE, Herring Pond(s) Indian Church.

Ministers:	William Simon(s)	(Indian preacher, ord. on the Vineyard 1695; frequent companion of Experience Mayhew on his missionary journeys; cta. 1718)
	Samuel Hunt	(appointed minister to Dartmouth 1708, associated with two Indian praying towns and churches; d. 1729/30)
	Samuel Holms	(Indian preacher, 1711-cta. 1718)
	Thomas Simons	(Indian preacher, m. as active in this vicinity ca. 1770)

As is the case with all of the Indian churches except Natick, no records of this church are known to exist or even to have been kept.

DARTMOUTH, Second Precinct/Parish, and Church (see New Bedford).

DEDHAM, First Church and Parish (U).
Allin Congregational Church (C).

The church was gathered on Nov. 8, 1638; its First Parish was organized during the early years of the eighteenth century. Following the resignation of the incumbent minister in 1818, there ensued the historic decision between church and parish over the choice of a successor. An orthodox minority of the parish (but a majority of the church membership), protesting the selection of a liberal candidate by the parish majority, withdrew. These orthodox, rebuffed in their attempt to win title to the meeting-house and church properties by the Dedham Decision of 1820, organized their own society and the Allin Church, and still claim descent from the 1638 body. The parish majority (with the liberal minority of the church) continued, and is still known as the First Church and Parish.

The church was gathered on Oct. 17, 1688, and the First Parish organized in 1825. In 1835, the orthodox minority of the church withdrew, forming their own church and, three years later, a society. In 1947, the two churches rejoined on a nondenominational basis.

Ministers: John Williams (ord. 1688; d. 1729)
 Jonathan Ashley (ord. 1732; d. 1780)
 John Taylor (sett. 1787; dism. 1806;
 d. 1840)

Ruling elders and deacons: due to the lack of records, the names of only four officers have been found. Deacon David Hoyt died a captive of the Indians, and Deacon Thomas French, also captured, was redeemed, ca. 1703. The diary of Deacon Noah Wright for the years ca. 1746 has been published by Stephen W. Williams, "Indian Wars," NEHGR, II (1848), 207-210. The Rowe Church Records mention a Deacon Asabel Wright of Deerfield in 1787.

Frederick L. DENNIS, First (U), extinct.

The church was gathered on June 22, 1727 as the Church in the East Precinct of Yarmouth (set off in 1721). In 1793, the precinct was incorporated as the town of Dennis, and the church's name was appropriately changed. Dennis soon developed two distinct centers of population, and church attendance was divided between the town's two meetinghouses, the one at North (Old) Dennis, the other at South Dennis. Not until 1817 was a Second Church gathered; it was located in South Dennis. In 1829, the North (now First) Parish (incorporated 1798) invited a liberal candidate to settle in the ministry; in protest, the orthodox majority of that church withdrew, forming a short-lived Trinitarian North Church and Third Congregational Society. The Unitarian First Church and Parish began to dwindle in membership, becoming extinct ca. 1860.

Ministers: Josiah Dennis (ord. 1727; d. 1763)
 Nathan Stone (ord. 1764; d. 1804)
 Caleb Holmes (ord. 1805; d. 1813)

DIGHTON, First (C).

The church was gathered in 1710 as the Church in the South Precinct of Taunton. The precinct (incorporated in 1709) became the town of Dighton in 1712, and the church's name was duly changed. When the original meetinghouse burned in 1767, its successor was located at Buck Plain, in protest against which location persons living in the southern and eastern parts of the town withdrew and organized their own worship services.¹ Attempts to reunite the two bodies as one church were dropped after 1800. As for the original or First Church, its First Congregational Society was incorporated in 1803, the name being changed to Central Congregational Society in 1828.

Ruling elders and deacons: in the absence of early church records, the names of only four officers have survived. The church probably did not employ ruling elders. The known deacons are:

Abraham Hathaway (d. 1725)
 Jared Talbot (d. 1733/34)
 Nathan Walker (d. 1771)
 Gideon Babbitt (d. 1832)

All records antedating 1815 are believed to have been taken or destroyed by the third minister at the time of his excommunication.

of the town. The project was suspended during the Revolutionary War, although appeals for abatement of taxes supporting the First Church's ministry were forwarded as early as 1770 and worship services already in progress. Whether there was a church gathered here in 1776 is uncertain; Ezra Stiles is known to have ministered here in 1776-1777.¹ The Pedo-Baptist Congregational Society was organized in 1769, but did not receive incorporation from the General Court until 1798. It seems likely that the church was formally gathered at the time of the first minister's ordination, Sept. 23, 1803, or shortly before that event. It has sometimes been called the South Church in Dighton.

Until Stone's removal, the church had to content itself with assigning diaconal tasks on an ad hoc basis to nonofficers.

DRACUT, Christ Church United (C).

The church was gathered on March 20, 1720/21. Recurrent disagreements over the most suitable location of the meetinghouse resulted in 1794 in the first separation from the original body. In this year, the building variously denominated the Centre or Central or "Old Yellow" Meeting House was erected to house the activities of the church thereafter known as Central Congregational Church. Dissatisfied residents of western Dracut thereupon withdrew, and built themselves a house of worship more conveniently located on the site of the present Pawtucket Church of Lowell.

A more critical division came in 1834, this time on doctrinal grounds. The majority of the church, being strongly orthodox in matters of belief, withdrew and in the same year incorporated their own body of Proprietors and Society. This church took the name of The (First) Evangelical Congregational Church, built and occupied the Hillside Meetinghouse, retaining whatever church records were then extant.¹

The First Parish and a remnant of the Central Church continued at the "Old Yellow" Meeting House, but the interest in Unitarianism appears to have been short-lived. In 1834, the First Parish voted the use of the meetinghouse to local Unitarians, Calvinists, Methodists and (in 1835) Baptists, in proportion to the monies subscribed for the upkeep of the building. By 1847, the Unitarian movement had entirely disappeared, and the church reorganized on specifically orthodox doctrinal grounds, retaining the extant parish records.

In 1969, the First Parish Church and The First Evangelical Congregational Church merged under the name of Christ Church United.

DUNSTABLE, Separate (C), extinct.

The partitioning of Old Dunstable (two-thirds of which was annexed to New Hampshire in 1741), saw the rise of factions contending over the location of a now-needed meetinghouse. One faction actually resided over the line in New Hampshire, the other in Massachusetts. In 1747, the "town" voted to settle New Light preacher Samuel Bird, designating the New Hampshire area as the site of the meetinghouse. The Massachusetts faction properly pointed out that the area in question was already a part of New Hampshire, that the New Hampshire legislature had not recognized "Dunstable, New Hampshire" as an incorporated town, and that Bird's settlement was therefore the act of a non-existent body.¹

The New Hampshire legislature recognized the force of this argument in 1748, although the illegally-gathered church probably continued its existence to 1751; in the latter year, Bird removed to Connecticut.

DUNSTABLE, First Congregational Parish (U/U), extinct.
Evangelical Congregational Church (C).

A church had been gathered at Old Dunstable in 1685,¹ but in 1741 the area (and church) was set off to New Hampshire. The ill-fated attempt to gather a church at Dunstable in 1747 is noted above. In 1755, Dunstable was divided into First and Second Parishes, and a church gathered in the Second Parish on May 12, 1757. When the First Parish became the parish of the town of Tyngsboro in 1789, the Second became the First Parish in Dunstable. It is with this latter parish (and church) that we have to do.

The religious history of Dunstable is further complicated by the doctrinal controversies of the early nineteenth century. Dunstable Universalists organized a society of their own in 1818, and like the orthodox church made use of the meetinghouse. In 1830, the orthodox withdrew from the First Parish and erected their own house of worship, and continue today as the Evangelical Congregational Church. Thereupon the First Parish reorganized (1831), assimilating the Universalists, and heard a succession of Universalist and Unitarian supplies. In 1864, the First Parish meetinghouse was destroyed by fire, and the EAST BRIDGEWATER, First Parish (U).

Made a town in 1656, Bridgewater originally contained present-day Bridgewater, East Bridgewater, and West Bridgewater, the oldest church dating from 1664. In 1716 the area was divided into northern and southern precincts, the latter becoming modern Bridgewater. Since the original church lay in the northern section, a church was gathered in the southern precinct in 1718.

The northern precinct was divided into duly incorporated eastern and western precincts in 1723, the 1664 church falling to the latter area. The eastern precinct now moved to gather a church of its own, accomplished on Oct. 28, 1724¹ under the name of the Third Church in Bridgewater.

This eastern precinct was made the town of East Bridgewater in 1823, and the following year the parish incorporated as the First Parish, the church taking the title of First Church.

EASTHAM, First or North (C), extinct.

The original church at Eastham was gathered in 1646, and its meetinghouse located at Nauset (now in Eastham). In 1718, the first house of worship was replaced with one more commodious, located in what is now Orleans. The following year the town was divided into northern and southern precincts, and the minister elected to remain with the Orleans congregation, deeming it to be the continuing body. The residents of the northern precinct either continued or else covenanted anew.¹

In 1723, the northern precinct was itself cut into a northern precinct (eventually to become Wellfleet) and a "Central Precinct" (which retained the name of Eastham when Wellfleet and Orleans achieved townhood). It is the history of the church of the "Central Precinct," latterly Eastham, that concerns us here.

The last settled minister closed his pastorate in 1859; by 1864 the meetinghouse had been sold, and the church's career was at an end.

EASTON, First Congregational Parish (U), inactive.

The church was gathered sometime during the years 1722-1723,¹ as the Church in the East Precinct of Norton. The precinct boundaries had been established in 1718, but legal incorporation was delayed until 1722. Three years later, the precinct became the town of Easton. Dissention over the location of the meetinghouse came to a head in 1750. The town voted to raze the old building, and did so, erecting a new house of worship on a site the minister, New Light Solomon Prentice, and two-thirds of the church members deemed inconvenient. Prentice and his supporters therefore voted to meet in private homes until suitable accommodations could be obtained. Relationships between the two factions deteriorated to the point where, in 1751, the Prentice party suspended from membership all who had forwarded the town's action on the old and new meetinghouses. The extraordinary reaction of the suspended church members was to declare themselves the church, and vote Prentice's dismissal from the ministry, an act with which the town now voted its concurrence. The dismissal was voided, however, by the fact that the "church" so voting consisted entirely of persons suspended from the membership of Prentice's church, and the concurrence of the town could only be interpreted as being of no effect.

1. Authorities give a variety of dates for the gathering of the church, ranging from 1713 to 1723; the earlier dates are based on the organization of a legally unrecognized "East Society of the [Taunton] North-Purchase," which in 1713 hired Ruling Elder William Pratt to preach to them. It is extremely doubtful that any church was covenanted before 1722.

The Prentice party might have made good its case, had it not decided in 1752 to declare for Presbyterianism. Transferring its activities to a new building erected on Prentice's land, it proceeded to elect ruling elders. Shortly thereafter, it invited the Presbytery to meet at Easton to deal with Prentice's drift into Baptist principles, in consequence of which the New Light minister was suspended. He moved to Grafton in 1755, and died in 1773. The Presbyterian church in Easton became extinct by 1762.

The movement of Prentice's church into Presbyterianism cleared the way for the remnants of the original church to reorganize and a minister was duly settled upon Prentice's suspension and removal. The parish was incorporated in 1792, and again in 1810.

In 1832, doctrinal differences found the parish showing Unitarian sympathies, while the church declared itself orthodox. In 1839, an orthodox society was organized to support the church, which by now had withdrawn from the parish. The parish and liberal remnant still continue, although listed by the denomination as inactive.

Ruling elders: there is presumptive evidence that the church employed or contemplated employing ruling elders, since one of the persons suspended by Prentice's party in 1751 was "Deacon and Ruling Elder Elect" Edward Hayward. It seems probable that once the Prentice party declared for Presbyterianism, the "town church" dropped the office from its structure. (The Presbyterian church elected six ruling elders between 1752 and 1754.)

When Prentice was installed in 1747, he found no church records of the previous pastorates. Records for the years 1747-1754 and 1762-1886 were extant when Chaffin wrote his History, but have since dropped from sight, the records of the inactive church dating from 1904. The orthodox church which withdrew in 1832-1839 has no records older than those dates. The extant parish records are owned and held by the clerk of the inactive Unitarian church.

A memorandum in CR II, p. 1, penned ca. 1840, states that the records of the church's first century had been lost or destroyed some years previous. The extant records are the property of the Federated Church, and are deposited with the Registrar of Probate, Duke's County Court House, Edgartown.

1. One authority reports Daggett's death in 1780, at the age of 90 (VS I); another reports him removing to Maine in 1790, and dying there in 1791 (Hall). It is entirely possible that two deacons by the name of Benjamin Daggett served the church.

2. Frederick L. Weis et alii, "Early Records of the Seventeenth Century Churches in Massachusetts Which Became Unitarian," UHSP, VII, ii (1941), 15, reports a transcript of the existing records owned and held by the Massachusetts Historical Society; that organization, however, claims no knowledge of any such item.

EDGARTOWN, Chappaquiddick Indian Church (C), extinct.

While one authority¹ denominates this "the earliest Indian church in Massachusetts," dating it 1659, this seems unlikely. The church gathered in 1659 was probably the one located at Sanchacantacket, northwest of Edgartown, now lying in the township of Oak Bluffs. In 1670, the Rev. Messrs. John Eliot, John Cotton, Jr., and Gov. Thomas Mayhew assisted the 1659 church in electing officers: Hiacoomes (pastor), John Tackanash (teacher), John Nohnoso and Joshua Momatchegin (ruling elders), and Kestumin (deacon). In 1675, the church divided into two independent bodies, to relieve the Indians on Chappaquiddick Island of the dangerous channel crossing. The officers were divided between the churches, Hiacoomes and Joshua Momatchegin being assigned to Chappaquiddick.

1. Frederick L. Weis, "The New England Company of 1649 and its Missionary Enterprises," CSMP, XXXVIII (1947-1951), 162. In the light of contemporary reports, e.g., letters of John Cotton, Jr. and Thomas Mayhew, Sr. written ca. 1674 (MHSC, 1st Ser., I 11792, rep. 1806], Ch. ix, it would appear that Weis was mistaken.

In 1683, Hiacoomes being much enfeebled, the churches were briefly reunited, but after his death in 1690, the Chappaquiddick church was reactivated, Joshua Momatchegin, Jonathan Amos and (probably) John (Hia)coomes serving it until 1706, when English missionaries took up its leadership.

See the bibliography on Indian churches, given under BOURNE, Herring Pond(s) Indian Church.

Ministers:	Gov. Thomas Mayhew, Sr.	(Vineyard governor; sett. Edgartown 1658, ministered to seven Indian praying towns and churches; d. 1681)
	John Mayhew	(sett. West Tisbury 1673, ministered to six Indian praying towns and churches; d. 1688/89)
	Hiacoomes	(Indian preacher, converted by Thomas Mayhew, Jr. 1643; ord. pastor Oak Bluffs, Sanchacantacket Indian Church 1670; sett. pastor Chappaquiddick Indian Church 1675; d. 1690)
	Joshua Momatchegin	(Indian preacher; ord. ruling elder Oak Bluffs, Sanchacantacket Indian Church 1670; sett. ruling elder Chappaquiddick Indian Church 1675; sett. ruling elder at Sanchacantacket ca. 1683; sett. pastor at Chappaquiddick 1690; d. 1703)
	John (Hia)coomes	(son of Hiacoomes, may have briefly assisted Momatchegin at Chappaquiddick; rem. to Lakeville; d. ca. 1718)

Experience Mayhew	(sett. Indian missionary 1694, ministered to nine Indian praying towns and churches; d. 1758)
Jonathan Amos	(Indian preacher; e. deacon Chappaquiddick 1698; e. pastor 1703; d. 1706. Also active at Oak Bluffs [Sanchacantacket] and Gay Head Indian Congregational Church)
Samuel Wiswall	(ord. Edgartown First 1713, some missionary work; d. 1746)
Zachariah Mayhew	(ord. Chilmark 1767, ministered to six Indian praying towns and churches; d. 1806)
Frederick Baylies	(missionary, also active at West Tisbury, Christiantown Indian Church; d. 1836)

Ruling elder: Joshua Momatchegin (see above).

Deacon: Jonathan Amos (see above).

As is the case with all of the Indian churches except Natick, no records of this church are known to exist or even to have been kept.

EGREMONT (C), extinct.

The church was gathered on Feb. 20, 1770; it was dissolved in 1814.

Minister: Eliphalet Steele (ord. 1770; dism. 1794; d. 1817)

Ruling elders: none.

Deacons: Ephraim Fitch (e. 1771; res. 1775)
 Timothy Kellogg (e. 1771)
 Ebenezer Olas (e. 1776)

The records are owned and held by the South Egremont Congregational Church (gathered in 1816, and usually considered the successor of the 1770 church).

ELBOW(S) TRACT OR SETTLEMENT (see Palmer).

ENFIELD (C), extinct.

The church was gathered on Dec. 2, 1789 as the Church in the South Parish of Greenwich (itself incorporated in 1787). The area became the town of Enfield in 1830, and the title of church and parish were accordingly changed. The church became extinct when the creation of the Quabbin Reservoir in 1936 destroyed Enfield and the neighboring towns.

Minister: Joshua Crosby (inst. 1789; d. 1838)

Ruling elders: none.

Deacons: the extant records begin in 1828 and close in 1836, but this has not prevented considerable speculation about the identity of the church's lay officers. Donald W. Howe et alii, Quabbin: The Lost Valley (Ware, Mass., 1951), p. 118, report that Rich and Stone were the deacons at the time of the church's being gathered; however, the latter may well have been Simon Stone, a Greenwich deacon.¹ Rich is identified as Deacon Ebenezer Rich, d. 1811, in History of the Connecticut Valley in Massachusetts, with Illustrations and Biographical Sketches of Some of Its Prominent Men and Pioneers (Philadelphia, 1879), I, 382. The Deacon John Reynolds of Enfield who attended a Southfield council in the 1780's (SOUTHFIELD CR I, p. 83) cannot be identified. The church manual published under the title Incorporated February 15, 1906. By-Laws, Creed and Covenant, Historical Sketch and Form of Service for Reception of Members of The Congregational Church, Enfield, Mass. (Belchertown, Mass., 1927) makes a definite claim that Aaron Woods and Darius Sabin were elected deacons shortly after the church's formation.

The extant records are owned and held by the American Antiquarian Society, Worcester.

Miscellaneous records: the volume entitled "Church Records" actually contains transcripts of chattel mortgages, and records of the Justice of the Peace, and of the Selectmen of the town.

ESSEX, First (C).

The church was gathered on Aug. 12, 1683 as the Second Church in Ipswich. The Second Parish in Ipswich had been organized in 1679, and was finally incorporated in 1776. An early (and frequently-used) name for the church and parish alike was Chebacco.

A New Light separation occurred in 1746, the seceders gathering Ipswich's Fourth Church and Parish (Essex Second), but in 1774 the two churches merged as one.

1. It is worth remarking that Howe casually records another tradition, hardly credible, that the church elected no deacons until 1828.

The name Essex was apparently applied to the area for quite some time before it became a town in 1819.

Ministers:	John Wise	(ord. 1683; d. 1725)
	Theophilus Pickering	(ord. 1727; d. 1747)
	Nehemiah Porter	(ord. 1749; dism. 1766; d. 1820)
	John Cleaveland	(ord. Ipswich Fourth 1747; pastor of merged churches from 1774; d. 1799)
	Josiah Webster	(ord. 1799; dism. 1806)

Ruling elders: despite Wise's advocacy of ruling elders, the original church did not employ such officers prior to 1774. The seceding (Ipswich Fourth) church, however, did elect such elders, and the merged church of 1774 continued these men in office, and later added one more to the lay eldership.

Francis Choate	(e. Ipswich Fourth 1747; con- tinued at merged church; d. 1777)
Eleazar Craft	(e. Ipswich Fourth 1771; con- tinued at merged church; d. 1790)
Deacon Seth Story	(e. after Choate's death; d. 1786)

Deacons:	John Burnham	(e. ca. 1683; d. 1694)
	Thomas Low	(e. 1683; d. 1712)
	William Goodhue	(e. 1683-1694; d. 1712)
	Seth Story	(e. 1694; d. 1732)
	John Choate	(e. 1712; d. 1733)
	John Andrews	(e. 1732 ?; d. 1750)
	John Burnham	(e. 1732; d. 1746)
	Seth Story	(e. 1746; elev. to ruling elder ca. 1777; d. 1786)
	Zechariah Story	(e. 1746; d. 1774)
	Solomon Gidding	(e. Ipswich Fourth 1747; con- tinued at merged church; d. 1788)
	Stephen Choate	(e. Ipswich Fourth 1747; con- tinued at merged church; d. 1815)
	Thomas Burnham	(e. Ipswich Fourth 1747; con- tinued at merged church; d. 1799)
	Jonathan Cogswell	(e. ca. 1788; d. 1812)

The records are owned by the church, and deposited at Essex Institute, Salem. The nature of the surviving volumes makes them difficult to categorize, and the inventory is further complicated by the intertwining of the records of Ipswich Second and Fourth churches.

ESSEX, Second (Ipswich Fourth) (C), extinct.

The church was gathered on May 22, 1746 by persons seceding from Essex's First Church (Ipswich Second). Its parish (Ipswich Sixth) was organized in 1752. In 1774, both church and parish merged with the parent organizations.

Minister: John Cleaveland (ord. 1747; pastor of merged church from 1774; d. 1799)

Ruling elders: Francis Choate (e. 1747; continued at merged church; d. 1777)

FAIRHAVEN, First (C).

The church was gathered on July 23, 1794 as the Second Church in New Bedford. With the incorporation of the town of Fairhaven in 1812, the church became the First, and in 1845 the First Congregational Society was incorporated. The church itself was incorporated on Aug. 22, 1895.

Minister: Isaiah Weston (ord. 1795; dism. 1808)

Ruling elders: none.

Deacons: none elected until 1809.

Only one book of records for the years antedating the church's incorporation is extant; it is owned and held by the church.

FALL RIVER (see Freetown).

FALLTOWN, Church (see Bernardston).

FALMOUTH, First (C).

The church was gathered on Oct. 10, 1708, although religious services under the leadership of Samuel Shiverick had been held locally since ca. 1700.¹

1. Shiverick, a Huguenot, was active in Falmouth before 1700; he was disowned as the minister by the town in 1701, and in 1702 was voted relief by the town. in 1702 he was further dismissed by the town, and in 1705 again granted relief. Town records of 1708 mention him as "our ancient minister."

FEDERAL STREET Church (see Boston, Arlington Street Church).

FEEDING HILLS (see Agawam).

FITCHBURG, First Parish (U/U).
Calvinistic Congregational (C).

The church was gathered on January 7, 1768. In 1802, the orthodox party in the church withdrew from the First Parish, incorporating the Calvinistick Congregational Society in 1805; in 1804 this body settled Titus T. Barton as its minister. Barton was dismissed in 1814, the act of incorporation was repealed the following year, but the Society did not disband.

The church of the First Parish, meanwhile, ordained William Bascom as its minister in 1804, from which post he was dismissed in 1813.

In 1813, after due negotiation, the two churches reunited, and installed a Calvinist, William Eaton, as minister in 1815; he was dismissed in 1823.

In 1823, the church voted to withdraw from the First Parish, and attached itself to the dormant Calvinistick Congregational Society. By court decision all extant parish records antedating 1823 were returned to the First Parish, and thereafter the two churches pursued their separate ways. During the 1940's, the First Universalist Church merged its identity with the First Parish; the name of the 1768 church and parish has been retained.

Ministers: John Payson (ord. 1768; diss. 1794; Samuel Worcester (ord. 1797; diss. 1802;
d. 1804)
d. 1821)

Ruling elders: none.

Deacons: Deacon Amos Kimball (e. 1768; d. 1774)¹
John Thurston (e. 1768; d. 1770-1780)
Edward Hartwell, Esq. (d. after 1768)
Timothy Bancroft (d. 1775)
David Goodrich (m. 1747; d. 1786)
John Buss, Jr. (e. after 1776; rem.
1780-1781) Ephraim Kimball, Jr. (e. ca. 1780; separated with the orthodox body
1802; d. 1825)
Daniel Putnam (m. 1787; separated with the orthodox body 1802;
d. 1813) Kendall Boutelle (m. 1790; separated with the orthodox body 1802;
d. 1819)

During the first separation, the church of the First Parish elected two deacons:

1. Mention must be made of two Lunenburg deacons who signed the petition to have Fitchburg set off as a town, viz. Benjamin Foster and Samuel Putnam; however, both continued as members of the Lunenburg church.

Some note should be taken of Ephraim Kimball (d. 1782), cousin of Deacon Amos Kimball and co-settler of Fitchburg. Active in the life of the Fitchburg church, and sometimes designated as "Deacon Kimball," there is no evidence that he was actually elected to such a position. See Ebenezer Bailey, "Deacon Ephraim Kimball," FHSP, V (1914), 80-94.

Jacob Jaquith (e. 1803; re-e. 1805; m. 1812)
 Joseph Tilden (e. 1805; m. 1812)

At the same time, the orthodox church continued in office Deacons Kimball, Jr., Putnam, and Boutelle, and since all these were well-advanced in years, saw fit to add several others, the following before 1806:

John Farwell (m. 1804; d. 1806)
 Ebenezer Thurston (e. 1804-1805; m. 1812)
 John Thurston, Jr. (e. 1805; m. 1810)
 Ephraim Kimball, Jr. (re-e. 1806; d. 1825)

The records antedating 1803 disappeared at the time of the first separation. The later records are divided among the First Parish, the Calvinistic Congregational Church, and the Fitchburg Historical Society. The inventory indicates the phase of the church(es') development to which given books of records pertain.

A. Records of the First Parish (1803-1813):

CR I (FP) - "Records of the 'Congregational Church' of Fitchburg." 1803-1813. Owned and held by FP.

PR I (FP) - "Fitchburg, first Parish Book, and contains the records of said Parish." 1805-[1849]. Owned and held by FHS.

Miscellaneous records: ten Parish Assessors' Rate Books, 1805-1814. Owned and held by FHS.

B. Records of the Calvinistic Congregational Church (1803-1813):

CR I (CC) - "Church Book of Records." 1803-1811. Owned by FP and held by FHS.

CR II (CC) - "Records of the congregational calvinistic Church in Fitchburg." 1810-1814. Owned by FP and held by FHS.

CR III (CC) - "This Book Contains the Records of the Donations Given to the Calvinistic Congregational Church in Fitchburg in 1805. Also, The records of 'the Church' in Fitchburg commencing with a meeting held Oct. 31, 1823." Memoranda, 1805-[1823]; church records, [1823-1832]. Owned and held by CC.

SR I (CC) - "Fitchburg, July AD 1805. This Book contains the Record, of the Calvinistick Congregational Society in Fitchburg." 1805-[1844]. Owned and held by CC.

C. Records of the merged church (1813-1823):

In addition to the items cited above as PR I (FP), CR III (CC) and SR I (CC):

CR II (FP) - Church Records, 1813-1868. Owned and held by FHS.

Miscellaneous records: nine Parish Assessors' Rate Books, 1815-1823. Owned and held by FHS.

D. Records of the First Parish (1823-present):

In addition to the items cited above as CR I (FP), CR II (FP) and the nineteen Parish Assessors' Rate Books:

CR II (FP) COPY - "Records of the first Church in Fitchburg." Copy for 1824-1825. Owned and held by FHS.

CR III (FP) - "Records of First Church, Fitchburg, Mass." 1868-1900. Owned and held by FP.

PR III (FP) - "Records of First Parish, Fitchburg, Mass." 1879-1908. Owned and held by FP.

Miscellaneous records: Parish Assessors' Rate Books (FP), 1824, 1825, 1827, 1828, owned and held by FHS; Parish Treasurer's Accounts (FP), 1814-1850 (owned and held by FP), 1854-1870 (owned and held by FHS); Pew Deeds (FP), 1837-1852, 1851-1875, 1896-1909, owned and held by FP; Parish Registers (FP), 1843-1883, 1883-1959, owned and held by FP.

The First Parish also owns and holds the records of the First Universalist Church of 1858, with which it merged during the 1940's.

Since the Calvinistic Congregational Church of 1823 lies outside the scope of this inventory, it needs only to be remarked that its records from that date to the present are complete.

FORTY-MILE RIVER, Indian Church (see Grafton, Hassanamesit Indian Praying Town and Church).

FOXBORO, Bethany Church (C).

The church was gathered on Nov. 25, 1779. The Trustees of the Ministerial Fund were incorporated in 1824. A society was organized in 1853, and in 1855, church and society took the names Orthodox Congregational Church and Society. At the recent incorporation of the church, the name Bethany Congregational Church was adopted.

FRAMINGHAM, First Parish (U).
Plymouth Congregational Church (C).

The church was gathered on Oct. 8, 1701, the First Parish being organized in 1826, shortly before the withdrawal of the orthodox majority of the church.¹

1. The orthodox body, originally the Hollis Evangelical Church, more recently named the Plymouth Congregational Church, also claims the 1701 date.

FREETOWN (C), extinct and reactivated.

The church was gathered on Sept. 30, 1747, and became virtually extinct by 1775.¹ On Feb. 4, 1827, the church

1. There is no evidence that the church was actually dissolved, as reported by Robert T. Swan, "Tenth Report on the Custody and Condition of the Public Documents of Parishes, Towns, and Counties" (Public Document No. 52), Public Documents of Massachusetts . . . for the Year 1897 (Boston, 1898), II, 165.

Freetown (which originally included what is now Fall River) had no regular religious services until 1704, when William Way took up duties there as (unordained) preacher and schoolmaster. After that, occasional preaching was supplied successively by Rev. Samuel Danforth of Taunton, and ca. 1710-1711 by the later minister of Norton, Joseph Avery. A Freetown selectman, Jonathan Dodson, was elected minister in 1713, but apparently was never settled (see Orin Fowler, History of Fall River, with Notices of Freetown and Tiverton [Fall River, 1841; rep. 1862]). Thomas Craighead, an ordained Presbyterian clergyman, ministered here from 1717 to 1741, but was never formally installed. Frederick L. Weis, The Colonial Clergy and The Colonial Churches of New England (Lancaster, Mass., 1936), p. 250, erroneously supposes there was a church at Freetown from 1704, and another at Fall River from 1776, and lists Silas Brett of Freetown as minister of both from 1747 to 1776; however, the Fall River church was gathered in 1816. Emil Oberholzer, Jr., Delinquent Saints (New York, 1956), p. 353, similarly lists two churches, and reports all records to be missing. C. C. Goen, Revivalism and Separatism in New England, 1740-1800 (New Haven and London, 1962), p. 94, depending wholly on secondary sources, makes the 1747 Freetown church a Separate body, and claims it became Baptist in 1775, removing in 1781 to Fall River and joining the First Baptist Church there.

was (in the words of the records) "reorganized" by six members of the old church, four persons transferring from other churches, and five persons making professions of faith. It took the name of the Freetown Congregational Church of Christ, and so continues today.

Minister: Silas Brett (ord. 1747; res. 1776; d. 1791)

Ruling elders: none.

GARDNER, First (C).

The church was gathered on Feb. 1, 1786, the First Parish having been organized the preceding year. A secession in 1830 saw the formation of an Evangelical Church, which reunited with the parent body in 1867. The church was incorporated in 1922.

Minister: Jonathan Osgood (ord. 1791; d. 1822)

Ruling elders and deacons: due to the absence of early records, the identity of the lay officers is not known. It is unlikely that the church ever employed ruling elders.

There are no records antedating 1867; the extant records are owned by the church and deposited in a local bank.

GAY HEAD, Indian Church (C), extinct.

It seems doubtful that this church was gathered (as some authorities claim) in 1663-1666, the time of the conversion of Sachem Metaark to Christianity. One source records members in full communion being admitted and dismissed by 1674, which would argue full organization by that year. However, the Cotton and Mayhew reports of 1674-1675 are vague regarding the Gay Head church. By 1698, it enjoyed an active native ministry, and had seen the completion of the meetinghouse (still standing in 1786).

The last baptism in the church took place in 1784; by 1792, the membership had been reduced to twenty-five persons, all of whom soon after either¹ died or were absorbed by Gay Head's Indian Baptist Church.

1. The Gay Head Indian Baptist Church was gathered ca. 1694. Having resisted the attempts of Judge Samuel Sewall to convert the members to Congregationalism in 1702, this church is the only Vineyard Indian Church surviving today. See "Diary of Samuel Sewall," MHSC, 5th Ser., VII (1882), 397.

made a town in 1838, church and parish took the title of First Church and Parish.

A secession during the years 1754-1770 resulted in the formation of a New Light conventicle which eventually adopted Baptist principles. The divisive results are illustrated by the fact that it took eight years and the hearing of sixty-three candidates before church and parish could agree on a successor to the first minister.

In 1754, New Light members of the First Church of Georgetown (then the Second Church of Rowley) withdrew from the parish church and, with additional recruits from the neighboring towns, inaugurated regular services of worship more to their theological taste. This New Light conventicle formally affiliated in 1781 with Haverhill's First Baptist Church, becoming a branch church until strong enough to become an independent Baptist church in 1784-1785. Since it is impossible to determine whether a church was gathered during the group's Separate Congregational phase, this entry is bracketed.

Minister: Eliphaz Chapman (sett. 1770; rem. 1772; d. 1814)

Ruling elders and deacons: in the absence of any records, nothing is known of officers who may have been appointed (if a church was gathered) during the years 1754-1781.

GRAFTON, Hassanamesit Indian Church (C), extinct.

Hassanamesit (or Hassanamisco) was established as a praying town in 1670 by John Eliot, and a church was gathered here on Sept. 23, 1671.¹ Whether the church, like the praying town, survived the vicissitudes of King Philip's War, is uncertain; it was extinct a number of years before the gathering of the English church at Grafton in 1731. See the bibliography on Indian churches, given under BOURNE, Herring Pond(s) Indian Church.

Ministers: Joseph Tuckappawill² (Indian preacher, active here from 1669; cta. 1677)
 Job Kattenanit (Indian preacher, here and Ashland [Magunkog] ca. 1675)
 Grindal Rawson (ord. Mendon 1684, associated with Indian praying town there; d. 1714/15)
 James "Printer" (Indian preacher, also active at Uxbridge [Waeuntug] 1708; d. ca. 1717)

Ruling elder: Piambohau (Natick Indian, ca. 1671)

Deacon: Naoas (ca. 1671)

As is the case with all of the Indian churches except Natick, no records of the church are known to exist or even to have been kept.

The Indian church which was gathered in This place was The second native ch in N E: it was formed either by Rev John Eliot or some one raised up Thro his instrumentality -- It is said to have been one of The most permanent establishments of The kind &c yet it wd seem as if it continued but a short time in its original state. It was formed in 1671 & three years after contained, it is said, about 16 members living in y^e town, besides several residing in other places. But 60 years after, as appears from this Book, it was necessary to form another, and none were natives probably."

2. Sometimes given as "Tukapewillin," "Tuppukkoowelim," or "Tappakkoowillim."

GRAFTON, The Congregational Church (C).
Unitarian Congregational Society (U).

The church was gathered on Dec. 28, 1731 as the Church in Hassanamisco. Old Lights opposed to the minister withdrew in 1743, but returned to the church after his dismissal four years later. However, a New Light secession in 1751 had quite different results, for by 1767 these persons had been absorbed into Grafton's First Baptist Church. The doctrinal controversies of the early nineteenth century saw the orthodox majority of the Grafton church withdrawing to organize the Evangelical Congregational Church in 1831. The following year, they created the Evangelical Congregational Society, and in 1837 obtained incorporation for the Proprietors of the Evangelical Congregational Meeting House. The town church, consisting then of persons of Unitarian sympathies, reorganized; its related prudential body took the name of The Congregational Society, and in 1864 the Proprietors of the Congregational Church received incorporation.

GRAFTON, Old Light Separate Church (C), extinct.

A separation by Old Lights from the town church occurred in 1743, the seceders proceeding to gather a Separate church by 1747, as indicated by the following excerpt from GRAFTON, CR I, 88: "The Chh of Christ in Grafton Voted to accept the whole Result of the venerable Council conven'd at Grafton July.7th. 1747 The 2d Paragraph of which is as follows. Secondly. In Answer to the Desire of the Chh of Christ here respecting their separating Members both Male & Female we are heartily greived to find that notwithstanding the Solemn Precautions which have been administred they have not only continued to Meet elsewhere but have proceeded some of them so farr as to Sign another Covenant and we Judge that they have been not only chargeable with a disorderly breaking away from the Communion of this Chh of Christ but that such their Combination & covenanting together is very sinful & dangerous and is matter of deep Lamentation by all."

With the dismissal of New Light Solomon Prentice by the town church in 1747, the Separates returned to the parent body.¹

No records of this church are known to exist, nor is there any data on its lay officers (if such were elected).

GRAFTON, New Light Separate Church (C), extinct.

The church was gathered on March 20, 1751 by New Lights who had seceded from the town church, following the dismissal of New Light Solomon Prentice. It was absorbed by Grafton's First Baptist Church, organized in 1767.

Minister: Ebenezer Wadsworth (ord. 1751; cta. 1767)

No records of this church are known to exist, nor is there any data on its lay officers. See C. C. Goen, loc. cit.

GRANBY (C).

The church was gathered on Oct. 3, 1762 as the Second or East Church in South Hadley, the Second or East precinct having been organized slightly earlier. The town of Granby was incorporated in 1768, and the church and parish took the title of First Church and Parish. In 1821, the First Parish divided into East and West Parishes (continuity remaining with the former body) and independent churches were established; fifteen years later, the churches and parishes were reunited.

GREENWICH, First (C), extinct.

The church was gathered on Dec. 20, 1749 as the Church in Quabbin Parish. The parish was set off by the General Court in 1739 and incorporated ten years later; formerly it was part of Narragansett Township No. 4 (so-called because it constituted a grant to soldiers who had helped put down an uprising among the Narragansett Indians). In 1787 the town was divided into two parishes, the North containing the 1749 church, and the South later to become the town of Enfield.

The church became extinct when the creation of the Quabbin Reservoir in 1936 destroyed Greenwich and the neighboring towns. Before disbanding, however, the church organized the Greenwich Church Foundation and Memorial, whose moderator and trustees are by requirement of the charter, the pastor and officers of the East Congregational Church of Ware.

GROTON, West Parish (see Pepperell).

GROVELAND (C).

The church was gathered on June 7, 1727 as the Second Church in Bradford. The Second or East Parish in Bradford had been incorporated the preceding year. In 1850 the parish was made the town of Groveland, and the church took the title of the Orthodox Congregational Church, incorporating in 1889, at which latter date the Congregational Society (incorporated in 1851) was dissolved.

Ministers: William Balch (ord. 1727; d. 1792)
Ebenezer Dutch (ord. 1779; d. 1813)

Ruling elder: Samuel Tenney is mentioned as a Groveland ruling elder in CR I, p. 99, and as a deacon, ibid., p. 582. Actually he was an officer of the West or Bradford Church, elected a deacon in 1713 and elevated to ruling elder in 1718.

Although Manual of the Congregational Church of Groveland, Mass. (Groveland, 1891) claims him to have been elected a deacon at Groveland in 1727, it is uncertain if Tenney actually terminated his membership and office at Bradford. He probably maintained a relationship with both churches, one formal, the other informal, until his death in 1740.

Deacons:	Richard Bailey	(e. 1727; d. 1748)
	William Hardy, Jr.	(e. 1728; d. 1759)
	Jonathan Tenny	(e. 1747; res. 1764; d. 1786)

HADLEY, First (C).

The church was gathered on Nov. 22, 1659; its society was organized during the nineteenth century, and the two incorporated as a single entity in 1920. The Trustees of the Congregational Ministerial Fund were incorporated in 1824.

Ministers: John Russell, Jr. (inst. 1659; d. 1692)
 Isaac Chauncy (ord. 1696; d. 1745)
 Chester Williams (ord. 1740/41; d. 1753)
 Samuel Hopkins, D.D. (ord. 1755; d. 1811)

Ruling elders: the only list of the church's lay officers is given in CR I at the back of the volume, and at least two hands are distinguishable in the prefacing of names with the symbol (#) which designates ruling elders. The later hand has applied the symbol to the sixth through the sixteenth names indiscriminately, suggesting that only the designations inscribed by the earlier hand are to be trusted.

William Goodwin (rem. ca. 1670)
 Peter Tilton (d. 1696)
 Philip Smith (d. 1685)

Deacons: if we are correct, the remaining names are those of deacons, given in the following order:

Nathaniel Dickinson (d. 1676)
 Richard Goodman (d. 1676)
 Samuel Church (d. 1684)
 Nathaniel White (d. 1741)
 Samuel Smith (rem. 1706)
 John Smith (d. 1727)
 Ichabod Smith (d. 1746)
 Samuel Dickinson (d. elsewhere 1746)
 Joseph Eastman (d. 1769)

 Eleazar Porter (d. 1797)
 Oliver Smith (d. 1808)
 Charles Phelps (d. 1814)
 Seth Smith (d. 1828)

The records for the years 1659-1765 were destroyed in a parsonage fire in the latter year. There is no trace of the records for 1765-1832, and it may be that they were sequestered by some church officer at the time of the secession of the persons constituting the Upper Mills (now North Hadley) church in the latter year. The extant records are owned and held by the church.

HAMILTON, First (C).

The church was gathered on Oct. 12, 1714 as the Third Church in Ipswich, the Parish of Ipswich Hamlet having been incorporated the previous year. Hamilton was made a town in 1793, the title of church and parish being changed to First. The First Congregational Parish was incorporated in 1829 and dissolved in 1884, when it was succeeded by the duly-incorporated First Congregational Society.

HAMPDEN, Federated (C).

Gathered in 1785, the church was known as the Church in South Wilbraham or the South Parish in Wilbraham (the latter incorporated in 1782). Hampden was made a town in 1878, and church and parish became the First in Hampden. In 1881, the First Congregational Society was incorporated. The church federated with local Methodists and Baptists in 1916.

The records are owned by the church, and deposited at a local bank.

1. The records do not distinguish between the two Deacons Joseph Stockbridge, nor is there any record of the second Joseph's election to the diaconate. But their tombstones indicate that each served as a deacon, that Joseph Stockbridge (Sr.) died in 1773 at the age of 100, and that Joseph Stockbridge (Jr.) died ten years later, aged 85. HARDWICK, Federated (C).

The church was gathered on Nov. 17, 1736 in the district or plantation known as Lambstown, which three years later became the town of Hardwick.

In 1827 the orthodox majority of the church withdrew, and formed the Calvinistic Church and First Congregational Society.

The original church and parish heard a succession of supply preachers, most of them Universalists, and in 1841 agreed to assist local Universalists (whose Society dated from 1824) in the building of a new meetinghouse. Thereafter, the First Church and Parish were identified with the Universalist tradition.

In recent years, the Calvinistic Church and the First Church have federated.

HARDWICK, Separate (C), extinct.

The church was gathered in 1750. In 1761, its members moved en bloc to Bennington, Vt., where together with Separates from Sunderland, Mass., they organized the First Church of Bennington. Their number was quickly increased by the arrival of the Separate Church from Newint, Ct., Separates from Amherst, Mass., and finally the pastor and members of the Westfield, Mass. Separate Church. During its eleven years in Massachusetts, the Hardwick church had no settled ministry, nor did it apparently ever employ ruling elders.

1. In 1795, the church voted to employ the title of "elder" for those deacons who had resigned the diaconate due to poor health or old age. Four years later, it was further voted that "the five elders of the church be a committee thereof to attend to the discipline of the church, and particularly to visit and admonish such of our brethren, as may be irregular in their walk with us, or in any way, lead an unchristian life" (CR I, p. 268). In practice, the office appears to have been merely honorific.

Commenting under date of July 19, 1795, Rev. William Bentley remarked that in Harvard's meeting house, "There is a Seat for the Elders & for the Deacons before the Pulpit, which gives two rows of pews on each side" (The Diary of William Bentley, D.D., Pastor of the East Church, Salem, Massachusetts (Gloucester, 1962), II, p. 153. Not every church whose meeting house boasted an "elder's bench" actually employed ruling elders, however; e.g., the church at Lexington (see Bentley, op. cit., II, p. 147).

HARVARD, Separate Church (C), extinct.

The history of Separatism at Harvard is obscure as to when the Separate Church was actually gathered. On Dec. 5, 1751, a committee of the First Church reported that advanced Separatist opinions were being propagated by persons in the northeast corner of the town. These secessionists had withdrawn from the worship and communion of the church, and were encouraging lay exhorters to hold forth in their homes. They further denied the churches of the standing order (and the First Church of Harvard in particular) to be true visible churches of Christ, insisting that such true churches may contain only the regenerates.

At some point during the years 1753-1760, a Separate preacher named Shadrach Ireland fled from Charlestown, Mass., and took up residence at Harvard. He became pastor of the Separate Church, in addition to his New Light tenets teaching the doctrines of his own bodily immortality, spiritual marriage, and possibly the community of goods and non-resistance. Ireland died in 1780, and the Separate movement foundered, being swiftly absorbed by Shakerism.

HAVERHILL, First Universalist-Unitarian (U).

The church was gathered on Oct. 24, 1645,¹ its parish being variously known as the First Parish, the Old Parish, and the South Parish.

During the early nineteenth century, the liberal wing of the church was able to prevent the settlement of an orthodox minister by bringing a number of Universalists into the parish; consequently, the orthodox withdrew in 1832 to form their own church and society. Five years later, perhaps by tacit agreement antedating the exodus of the orthodox, the Universalists departed, joining the already existing Universalist church and society.

The First Parish sold its church properties in 1926, but kept the society alive until 1950, when it federated with the First Universalist Church.

HAVERHILL, North Parish Community Church (C).

The church was gathered on Nov. 4, 1730 as the Church in the North Parish of Haverhill, which had been organized in 1728. The redrawing of the Massachusetts-New Hampshire line in 1741 ceded much of the area to New Hampshire, that which remained in Massachusetts being incorporated as "A Parish" in 1753. The Trustees of the Ministerial Fund in the North Parish were incorporated in 1823. In 1859 the church was reorganized by act of an ecclesiastical council. Continued relations through the years between the Haverhill North Parish Church and Society, and the Plaistow (N.H.) and North Parish Congregational Church, resulted in 1930 in the federation of the two bodies, under the name of the North Parish Community Church, most of the subsequent activities of the congregation taking place in the Haverhill church building. The church was incorporated in 1949.

HAVERHILL, Third (C).

The church was gathered on Oct. 22, 1735 as the Church in the West Parish of Haverhill, the parish having been organized in 1734. In 1761-1762, the church voted to become Presbyterian, but returned to Congregationalism as soon as the dismissal of the minister had been effected. During the years 1801-1826, the church found itself unable to make a satisfactory financial settlement with any candidate for the pulpit, due to the parish's policy of rebating the ministerial taxes of Baptist, Methodist and Universalist members of the parish. In 1829, the Congregationalists withdrew from the parish (then predominantly Universalist in sentiment) and in 1831 settled an orthodox minister; the parish in turn settled a Universalist. In 1851 a dispute over the right to a legacy prompted the Congregationalists to offer the Universalists $2400 for the right to become "The (West) Parish." The next year, the Universalists accepted, and reorganized as The First Universalist Society in the West Parish of Haverhill.¹ By this arrangement, the Congregational body became once again legally entitled to the name "The West Parish." The church was incorporated in 1921.

HAVERHILL, Fourth (C), extinct.

The church was gathered on Nov. 28, 1744 as the Fourth Church (Church in the East Parish) of Haverhill, the parish having been organized in 1743. After the dismissal of Tory Benjamin Parker in 1777, the church suffered extensive membership losses and became inactive.

A new covenant and confession of faith was adopted in 1797, and on Jan. 11 of that year the church was reconstituted by act of ecclesiastical council. The last regular minister removed in 1906, and the church soon after became extinct.¹

HAWLEY, East Church (see Hawley, Charlemont, First).

HEAD OF THE RIVER, Society (see New Bedford).

HEATH, First (C), extinct.

The church was gathered on Apr. 15, 1785 to replace the First Church of Charlemont.

By a redrawing of the town lines in 1785, the church properties were ceded to Heath, and (largely for purposes of removing the minister) the older church disbanded, and the Heath church created. The parish was also organized in 1785 as the Trinity Congregational Parish.

In 1892, the Heath church merged its identity with the other Protestant bodies of the town, organizing the Union Evangelical Church.

HOLYOKE, First (C).

In 1750, what is now Holyoke and Chicopee had been constituted as the Fifth Parish of Springfield. With the setting off of Chicopee as Springfield's Second Parish in 1752, and the division of Springfield itself into Springfield and West Springfield in 1774, by 1786 the Holyoke area had become the Third (Ireland) Parish of West Springfield.

The Congregational Church in Ireland Parish (sometimes called the Third Church in West Springfield) was gathered on Dec. 4, 1799; however, the presence of a number of Baptist families in the parish made the settlement of a minister impossible. In 1803 the Baptists withdrew to gather their own church, making their meetinghouse available to the Congregationalists and eventually ceding it to them when a new building for the Baptist church was erected in 1827.

Until 1834, the Congregationalists had no settled minister, being supplied by preachers provided by the state and county Home Missionary societies.

The church was incorporated in 1943, and the society merged with it in 1950. In 1962, the church merged with a local Evangelical and Reformed church, to form the First United Church of Christ in Springfield.

Accounts, 1836-1859. Only cursory examination was permitted, but it appears that most or all of the Parish Assessors' Rate Books are extant, together with the records of church officers and committees.

HOUSATONIC Indian Church (see Stockbridge, Housatonic Indian Church and First Congregational Church).

HUBBARDSTON, First Parish (U).
Evangelical Congregational Church (C).

The church was gathered on Feb. 14, 1770; its parish was organized soon afterward. Following the withdrawal of the orthodox in 1827, the church took the title of First Congregational Church. The First Congregational Society was organized in 1828, and incorporated in 1833. Orthodox seceders gathered the Evangelical Congregational Church in 1827; this church also claims the 1770 founding date.

Ministers: Nehemiah Parker (ord. 1770; dism. 1800;
d. 1801)
David Kendall (ord. 1802; dism. 1809;
d. 1853)

Ruling elders: none.

Deacons: Joseph Eveleth (e. 1771; dism. 1788)
Adam Wheeler (e. 1771; dism. 1788)
Elisha Woodward (e. 1778; d. 1810)
Ebenezer Rice (e. 1787)
Ephraim Allen (e. 1796; res. 1818)
Otis Parker (e. 1805; withdrew with orthodox 1827; deacon in that church,
res. 1840)

The one extant volume of church records contains a synopsis of Hubbardston's church history by Abner D. Jones, Unitarian minister from 1828 to 1832. Jones remarked the lack of early church records, as well as the fact that the seceding orthodox carried any fragmentary records with them. These last, however, were eventually returned to the Unitarians and copied into the present book.

HULL (C), extinct.

It does not appear that a church was gathered here until Sept. 13, 1670, although some authorities have argued that such an event took place in 1644.¹ Apparently Marmaduke Matthews was "settled" here from 1644 to 1649, but the formal organization of the church was deferred. The last male member of the church of 1670 died ca. 1789.

1. BOSTON, DORCHESTER, CR PUB, p. 63: "The 11 (7) 70 [Sept. 11, 1670] ther was a letter read to y^e Church wch Came from Hull expressing ther intent to enter into Church state & ordaining (the Revd mr Whitman &) some officer or officers besides as also ther desier that or Church would send some messengers to assigt & hold out y^e right hand of ffellowship unto them y^e day appointed is y^e 13th this Instant" "The 18 7 70 after y^e Evening exerciz y^e Elder declared to y^e Church y^e return of ther messadg to Hull Viz that ther was a Church gathered & a teaching officer & a rulling elder ordained & eleven p'sons in all entered into Covenant at that time." Joseph S. Clark, A Historical Sketch of the Congregational Church in Massachusetts, from 1620 to 1858 (Boston, 1858), p. 33, quotes Savage as assuming the church was gathered in 1644.

Ministers:	Zechariah Whitman	(ord. 1670; d. 1726)
	Ezra Carpenter	(ord. 1725; dism. 1746; d. 1785)
	Samuel Veazie	(inst. 1753; res. 1767; d. 1797)

	Elhanan Winchester, Jr.	(inst. 1773; rem. 1773; d. 1797)

Ruling elders: the identity of the elder ordained in 1670 is unknown, nor is it possible to discover if the church employed more than one of these officers during its career.¹

Deacons:	Benjamin Loring	(m. 1725)
	John Binney	(e. 1734; d. 1759)

HUNTINGTON, First (C).

In 1773 the eastern part of the now-extinct town of Murrayfield was set off as the town of Norwich. With the coming of the railroad, the area near the station was called "Chester Village" to distinguish it from "Chester Factories" (now the town of Chester).

The Congregational Church of Norwich was gathered in July of 1778 at what later became known as "Chester Village" (or "Falley's Crossroads"). The First Parish was organized in 1832.

1. See BOSTON, Dorchester, First, CR PUB, 63.

The name of the town (and consequently of the church and parish) was changed to Huntington in 1855. The church, which was incorporated in 1917, styles itself "The Church on Norwich Hill."

Ministers: Stephen Tracy (inst. 1781; dism. 1799; d. 1822)
 Benjamin B. Woodbridge (ord. 1799; dism. 1831; d. 1844)

Ruling elders: none.

Deacons: John Kirkland (e. ca. 1778)
 Jonathan Ware (e. ca. 1778)
 Artemas Knight (rem. 1835)

There are no extant records antedating 1832, according to the memorandum given in CR I, p. 3. The extant records are owned and held by the church.

IPSWICH, First and South (C).

The First Church was gathered¹ in June of 1634, and the First Parish was organized in 1724. The present church takes its name from its merger early in this present century with the South Church of Ipswich, for which a separate entry is made below.

Ministers:	Thomas Parker	(ord. pastor 1634; rem. 1635; d. 1677)

LAKEVILLE, Assawampsett Indian Church (C), extinct.

The history of the church is identical with that of the Lakeville Nemasket Indian Church.

Ministers: the personnel is identical, except that Stephen is not mentioned in connection with Assawampsett, and that an Indian preacher named Jocelyn is mentioned here, from 1698 to 1711.

LAKEVILLE, Nemasket Indian Church (C), extinct.

The church was gathered ca. 1665 in a part of Middleboro¹ now lying within the boundaries of Lakeville. Early in the eighteenth century it was absorbed by the Middleboro Titicut Indian Church.

See the bibliography on Indian churches, given under BOURNE, Herring Pond(s) Indian Church.

Ministers:	John Cotton, Jr.	(Indian mission on the Vineyard 1664-1667; ord. Plymouth First 1669, also ministered to two dozen Indian praying towns and churches; rem. 1697; d. 1699)

LANCASTER, Second Church and Precinct (see Sterling).

LANESBORO, Federated Church.

The church was gathered on March 28, 1764 as the Church in New Framingham. The town was organized as Lanesboro the following year, and the name of the church was accordingly changed. The First Parish came into being in 1824. In 1918, the church federated with local Methodists, Baptists and other Protestants. It is currently unaffiliated, the Congregational element having severed connections with that denomination in 1958.

LEOMINSTER, First Congregational Society (U).

The church was gathered on Sept. 14, 1743, its parish being incorporated the same year.

A schism during the years 1758-1762 saw the creation of a church in the Second Precinct (see LEOMINSTER, Second Church). The schism ending in 1787, the First and Second Precincts were united as "one Parish."

Following the withdrawal of the orthodox, the Parish of the First Congregational Society was reorganized in 1835.

Ministers:	John Rogers	(ord. 1743; dism. 1758; sett. Leominster Second Church 1762-1787; d. 1789)

LEOMINSTER, Second (C), extinct.

John Rogers was dismissed from the ministry of Leominster's First Church for unsound doctrine in 1758. Rogers entertained a suit against the town for four years, but agreed to settle differences at a mutual council in 1761. On Jan. 21, 1762 the town voted Rogers and his followers permission to be a Second Precinct and to hold religious services. A further vote of the town in 1768 gave the church in the Second Precinct the right to hold services in "the school house on the north side of the River." The Second Church and John Rogers' ministry came to a close at the same time; in 1787, the First and Second Precincts were united as "one Parish."

Minister: John Rogers (ord. Leominster First Church 1743; dism. 1758; sett. Second Church 1762-1787; d. 1789)

Ruling elders: none.

Deacons: Jonathan White (e. Leominster First Church 1743; rem. to Second Church 1762)
Simon Butler (e. 1765; demitted at the unification of the precincts 1787)

No records of this church are known to exist. Possibly they were destroyed by the same party who mutilated the earliest book of Leominster First Church records. See David Wilder, The History of Leominster or the Northern Half of the Lancaster New or Additional Grant (Fitchburg, 1853).

LEVERETT, First (C).

The church was gathered on Oct. 10, 1774. The First Congregational Society was organized in 1861, and dissolved at the incorporation of the church in 1898.

Minister: Henry Williams (ord. 1784; d. 1811)

Ruling elders and deacons: due to the lack of early records, only one church lay officer is known, viz., Deacon Jonathan Field, who attended an ordination council at Rowe in 1787.

The records antedating 1854 have disappeared; the extant records are owned by the church and deposited with the Town Clerk.

LOUDON, Church (see Otis).

LOWELL, Pawtucket (C).

The history of this church begins in 1794 when residents of western Dracut, dissatisfied with the location of the new Dracut meetinghouse, withdrew and made an abortive attempt to erect their own house of worship at what is now Hovey Square.

In June of 1797, these seceders organized and incorporated the West Congregational Society, razed the uncompleted Hovey Square building, and used the timbers to construct a meetinghouse at Pawtucket Falls. The first recorded parish meeting was held on July 6, 1797.

It is generally agreed that a church was gathered on Aug. 31, 1797; however, no minister was settled here until 1821, and the records consulted by historians of the area open in 1819.

In the latter year, the church voted itself Presbyterian; in 1837, it adopted Congregational principles once again. The church was incorporated in 1929.

Ruling elders and deacons: the first lay officers known were elected in 1821.

A Manual of The First Church, Ludlow, Mass. (n.p., 1897) remarks the lack of records antedating 1819. The books cited as missing are reputed to be extant, but the church officers do not know their whereabouts. It seems likely that CR I was missing ca. 1900 when Cooke copied CR II.

CR I - MISSING, Church Records, 1819-1839.

LYNN, First (C).

The church was gathered in somewhat irregular fashion in the summer of 1632.¹ Dissention arose soon thereafter,

1. The minister and several of those who were to comprise the church arrived at Boston on June 5. One tradition places his ordination or installation on June 8, but the majority of authorities hold that this event took place during the month of August. See Joseph S. Clark, A Historical Sketch of the Congregational Churches in Massachusetts, from 1620 to 1858 (Boston, 1858), pp. 14-15; Frederick L. Weis, The Colonial Clergy and The Colonial Churches of New England (Lancaster, Mass., 1936), p. 23.

one party calling in question the church's right to be considered such. An advisory council was convened, and it was agreed that the Lynn body was "a true church, though not constituted, at first, in due order, yet after consent and practice of a church estate had supplied that defect"¹

Nonetheless, "a new church was gathered" at the coming of the second minister, Nov. 8, 1636, to allay any fears concerning Lynn's ecclesiastical organization.

The parish was organized ca. 1721. It was superceded by the First Congregational Society, which in turn was dissolved at the time of the church's incorporation in 1944.

Center (C).

The church was gathered on Aug. 17, 1720 as the Second Church in Lynn.¹ The North Parish had been incorporated in 1713. In 1782, Lynnfield became a town, and church and parish were denominated the First.

In 1832, the orthodox withdrew, organizing the Orthodox Evangelical Society and Evangelical Congregational Church. During the ensuing years, membership in the First Church and Parish diminished, and worship under Unitarian auspices was sporadic. Universalist preaching was heard from 1849 to 1855, and from then on lay leadership dominated the older bodies. The First Parish and Church became extinct after 1936.

The present Congregational Church therefore claims the founding date of 1720, and holds the old church and parish records.

1. Deacon John Swain, who died in 1815, was probably elected to the diaconate after 1805.

MALDEN, First Parish (Univ.).
First Church (C).

The church was gathered on May 11, 1649. Its parish was organized in 1739, following the division of the town into two precincts and the creation of a church in the Second or South Precinct in 1734. The older organization (and its parish) took the title of First (or North) Church and Parish.¹ The Trustees of the Malden Ministerial Fund were incorporated in 1807.

In 1827, parish meetings dominated successively by orthodox and Universalist majorities voted first to settle an orthodox cleric, then a Universalist. The church voted its approval of the latter candidate. In 1832, the orthodox withdrew from the church of the parish, formed their own society, and took the title of "First Church."

The First Parish meanwhile reorganized, and was incorporated finally in 1894; its church continued its adherence to Universalist principles.

Both churches claim the founding date of 1649, although by court decision legal title to the church properties belong to the church of the First Parish.²

1. Michael Wigglesworth records in his diary his success in preventing Hills' ordination as ruling elder (Edmund S. Morgan (ed.), "The Diary of Michael Wigglesworth," CSMP, XXXV [1942-46], 310-444). Ostensibly Hills' presiding over his own wedding and his peculiar notions about baptism occasioned Wigglesworth's opposition; furthermore, Hills' outspoken support of Wigglesworth's ousted predecessor probably had considerable to do with spurring the second minister's campaign to bar the elder-elect from office. See op. cit., 413-419.

The church records antedating 1770 have long been lost.¹ The extant records of church and parish are divided between the two surviving churches, and are separately cited below. MANSFIELD (U), extinct.

In 1731, a part of Norton was set off as "A Separate Precinct" (sometimes called the North Precinct), and on Feb. 23, 1737 a church was gathered here. When the area became the town of Mansfield in 1770, the church's name was accordingly changed, and at the same time, a parish was created.

The orthodox members of the church withdrew in 1838, forming their own society and reorganizing themselves as a church. The town (or First Parish) church continued under Unitarian auspices until 1889, when the ownership of its properties was transferred to the First Universalist Parish, now also extinct.

MARION (C).

The town of Rochester was organized in 1686, and a church gathered there in 1703. A meetinghouse located in the vicinity of present-day Marion was replaced with another at Rochester Center. A second precinct was set off in 1736 (modern Mattapoisett), and a third in 1791 (now called "North Rochester.") The Fourth Congregational Precinct (Sippican Parish) in Rochester was incorporated in 1798, and eventually, in 1852, became the town of Marion. Preaching was heard in Marion as early as 1795; in 1799 the residents completed their own meetinghouse and Oliver Cobb, the minister of Rochester's First Church, divided his time between the two congregations. In 1827, an ecclesiastical council convened to ordain a colleague instead advised a division into two distinct churches. Cobb elected to remain at Marion; his colleague-elect was ordained over the Rochester First Church. By terms of the division, the records (and continuity) were to remain at Rochester, and a copy of the records to be provided the Marion church. The Marion church further agreed to take the name "South Church" rather than "First Church," the latter title belonging to the Rochester body.

1. Apparently the records were allocated in direct contradiction to the terms of the agreement. This may have inclined Frederick L. Weis to present his data for the 1703 church under Marion, rather than under Rochester. See The Colonial Clergy and The Colonial Churches of New England (Lancaster, Mass., 1936), p. 258.

The Proprietors of the Fund for Supporting Public Worship in the Fourth Congregational Precinct in the Town of Rochester were incorporated in 1826, the Congregational Church and Society in Marion in 1856, and the First Congregational Society in 1878. The church was incorporated in 1919.

Minister: Oliver Cobb, D.D. (ord. Rochester First Church 1799, serving congregations there and at this meeting-house; served here following division into two churches 1827; d. 1849)

Ruling elders and deacons: apparently no lay officers were elected until after 1827.

The earliest Rochester church records date from 1725, and it is unlikely that separate records were kept at Marion until 1827. See ROCHESTER FIRST, CR I COPY and CR II. The Marion records are owned and held by the church, the first volume apparently having been destroyed in the hurricane of 1938.

MARLBORO, First (C).

The church was gathered on Oct. 3, 1666, the First Parish being organized in 1808. In 1833 the parish was superceded by the First Evangelical Congregational Society, itself replaced by the Union Society of Marlborough, incorporated in 1835. In the latter year the church took the name, Union Congregational Church; it was incorporated in 1891.

The records dating 1704 have long since disappeared. The extant records are owned and held by the church.

Not cited below, but useful in the absence of records for the first pastorate is Samuel A. Green (ed.), "Diary of Rev. William Brinsmead," MHSP, 2nd Ser., XV (1887-1889), 298-302. Green excerpts a Latin MS notebook, apparently the second of two volumes, in which Brinsmead recorded sermon notes and miscellaneous church acts.

MARSHFIELD, Marshfield Hills, Second (U).

The church was gathered in 1738/39 as the Second Church in Marshfield. The Second or North Precinct/Parish/Society (the names are used interchangeably) was incorporated under the last-mentioned title in 1738, having been organized in 1713.

Ministers: Atherton Wales (ord. 1739; d. 1795)
Elijah Leonard (ord. 1789; d. 1834)

Ruling elders and deacons: due to the lack of records, none of the names of lay officers have survived.

Church records from the inception of the church were extant as recently as 1940, when they were excerpted for publication in Hagar's tercentenary history (see MARSHFIELD, First). The present officers of the church and parish report no knowledge of any records antedating the federation of the church ca. 1930.

MARSHPEE (see Mashpee).

MARTHA'S VINEYARD (see Chilmark, Edgartown, Gay Head, Gosnold, Tisbury, West Tisbury).

MASHPEE, Indian Church (C).

The church was gathered on Aug. 17, 1670, the territory having been purchased by Richard Bourne for the perpetual use of the native population. The district (later town) of Mashpee was organized in 1763.

During the ministry of William Apes, ca. 1830, a separate Baptist church was gathered in Mashpee by Joseph Amos (Blind Jo); by 1858, the community had largely accepted Baptist principles, and the 1670 church was so identified. Today the church is technically interdenominational, and largely inactive, although the meetinghouse is maintained as an historical site.

 Joseph Amos (Baptist Indian preacher known as "Blind Jo," active here ca. 1840)

Deacon: Zacheus Popmunet (m. 1767; d. 1770)

As is the case with all of the Indian churches except Natick, no records of this church are known to exist or even to have been kept.

MATTAPOISETT (C).

The church was gathered on July 27, 1736 as the Second Church in Rochester, the Second Precinct having been incorporated the previous month. The Proprietors of the Meeting House were organized in 1842. When the area became the town of Mattapoisett in 1857, the name of the church was accordingly changed, and three years later, the precinct was reorganized as the First Precinct in Mattapoisett (and still continues today).

MEDFORD, Unitarian-Universalist Church (U/Univ.).

The church was gathered on Feb. 11, 1713, and the First Parish incorporated in 1824. The Trustees of the Congregational Ministerial Fund for the First Parish in the Town of Medford were incorporated in 1827. In 1961, a merger of the First Parish Church, and two local Universalist groups created the Unitarian-Universalist Church of Medford.

MEDWAY, Second (Federated) Church of West Medway (C).

The first church in Medway was gathered in 1714. In 1748, the town was divided into western and eastern precincts, the latter containing the original church of the town. This eastern precinct in 1885 became the town of Millis, which therefore contains the original First Church of Medway.

2. During the months this inventory was being compiled, the church was involved in negotiating the merger consummated in 1961. Church officers were unable to locate any records other than those cited here.

The Second Church in Medway was gathered in the West Precinct on Oct. 4, 1750.¹ The federation is of very recent date.

The church officers report no records extant antedating the present century. Records for the first pastorate were apparently extant at the time E. O. Jameson published The History of Medway, Mass., 1713-1885 (Millis, 1886), but have since disappeared.

The Congregational Library, Boston, holds a packet of miscellaneous papers, including records of scattered church votes taken by the First and Second Churches of Medway. See E. O. Jameson, Historical Discourse, 1714-1876 (Boston, 1877); E. O. Jameson, History of Medway, Mass., 1713-1885 (Millis, 1886); George F. Partridge, History of the Town of Bellingham, Massachusetts, 1719-1919 (Bellingham, 1919), especially pp. 79-80; Herbert N. Hixon, October 4th 1750 - October 7-8th 1850 Historical Address given at the Bi-Centennial of the Second Church of Christ in Medway West Medway, Massachusetts (n.p., 1950); and the several church Manuals, especially the one printed at Boston in 1879.

1. Frederick L. Weis, The Colonial Clergy and The Colonial Churches of New England (Lancaster, Mass., 1936), p. 278, lists this church as the First Congregational Church, under West Medway, which is not an independent town. C. C. Goen, Revivalism and Separatism in New England, 1740-1800 (New Haven and London, 1962), pp. 300, 315, lists this as a Separate church for the duration of the first pastorate, but the evidence presented is inconclusive.

The church was gathered on Dec. 1, 1669. The First Congregational Society was incorporated in 1784 and dissolved in 1792, being effectually superceded by the First Parish, which had taken form some years earlier in succession to the precinct organization.

Prior to the gathering of the church, preaching was supplied by Benjamin Eliot (1667-1668) and John Rayner, Jr. (1668, 1669), sometimes cited as the church's first ministers.¹

MIDDLEBORO, Titicut Indian Church (C), extinct.¹

The church was gathered ca. 1674 although missionary activity had encouraged the natives to erect a meetinghouse as early as 1665. Early in the eighteenth century, this church absorbed the membership of Lakeville's Nemasket and Assawompsett Indian churches. The Titicut church became extinct in 1760, when the surviving members began worshipping at Middleboro's North Church. See the bibliography on Indian churches, given under BOURNE, Herring Pond(s) Indian Church.

 John Symons (Indian preacher 1747-1757)

As is the case with all of the Indian churches except Natick, no records of this church are known to exist or even to have been kept.

MIDDLEBORO, First (C).

The church was gathered on Dec. 26, 1694, and a parish organization created about the same time. In 1744, a division over the choice of a new minister resulted in the large majority of the church voting to settle New Light Sylvanus Conant, with the parish vetoing the church's action. The church requested an ecclesiastical council, and on its advice and with its assistance, proceeded to Conant's ordination. The parish thereupon extended a call to Old Light Thomas Weld, and brought about his ordination to the ministry of the "standing party" of the church. The parish and "standing party" controlling the meetinghouse, the Conant faction withdrew, erected their own meetinghouse and proceeded as a "Second Church." Within a few years, Weld's adherents became dissatisfied with his ministry, and finally effected his dismissal from his post. The two churches now moved closer together, and reunited in 1756.¹

The town had been divided into two precincts in 1719, the 1694 church being located in the First or East Precinct, and the Second Precinct constituting present-day Lakeville.² The precinct nomenclature was retained at the incorporation in 1803 of the Trustees of the Funds for the Support of a Congregational Teacher of Piety, Religion and Morality in the First Precinct. The First Parish, so-called, was organized in 1868.

1. The church's publications omit Weld from the list of ministers, tracing the ministerial continuity through Conant.

2. A Third Precinct, created in 1743, is now known as "North Middleboro."

1. The original from which Fuller made his copy was reported lost in 1734. The copy itself was lost about the same time, and restored to the church in 1826. Since the original must have extended into the eighteenth century, it is to be regretted that Fuller did not make a complete copy.

MIDDLEBORO, North (C).

Historians have expressed some uncertainty as to whether this church represents one continuous organization from 1748 or alternatively, from 1756, or else comprises a sequence of two churches, one extinct and one still surviving.¹

This northern section of Middleboro (adjoining the southern part of Bridgewater) was set off as Titicut Precinct in 1743, and so incorporated the following year. The ministerial choice of the majority of the precinct was Isaac Backus, a Connecticut Separate, who scrupled against becoming a minister of the standing order. Nonetheless, on Feb. 16, 1748, a church was gathered here, strongly committed to Separate principles.

The community was not long in dividing into three or four factions. A Baptist group, led by Ebenezer Hinds, opposed the church's practice of mixed communion with pedobaptists. The pedobaptists were divided between such as approved Backus' attitudes on church discipline, and those opposed.

1. See Isaac Backus, A [Church] History of New England, II (Providence, 1784), pp. 206-207; III (Boston, 1796), pp. 135-137. The above reconstruction of events at Titicut owes much to the studies of John M. Bumsted, "The Pilgrims' Progress: The Ecclesiastical History of Southeastern Massachusetts, 1620-1775" (unpublished Ph.D. dissertation, Department of History, Brown University, 1965).

Some evidence exists of a fourth group, pedobaptists opposed to mixed communion with Baptists.

Midway in 1753 Backus and his supporters confessed themselves censurable, and were reconciled to their pro-mixed-communion pedobaptist critics. Many of these now followed Backus into the Baptist denomination in 1756.

The present North Congregational Church appears to have been constituted in 1756 by such as did not accompany Backus; they comprised persons dismissed from the First Churches of Middleboro and Bridgewater, together with pedobaptist remnants of the 1748-1756 Separate mixed communion church, although it is uncertain whether or not a covenanting de novo was made in 1756.

MIDDLE GRANVILLE Parish (see Granville, Second, West).

MIDDLETON (C).
(Univ.), extinct.

The church was gathered on Oct. 22, 1729. In 1831, when the minister of their choice proved unacceptable to the "parish," the orthodox withdrew and organized their own Evangelical Congregational Society. The minority of the church and members of the "parish" saw to the organizing of a Congregational Society in 1832, but found themselves unable to support the Universalist ministry of their choice. By 1846 the records and much of the church property had been turned over to the orthodox group. The Universalist society and church did not survive the nineteenth century; the Congregational church and society (incorporated as one in 1950) is the surviving descendent of the 1729 church.

Ministers: Andrew Peters (ord. 1729; d. 1756)
 Elias Smith (ord. 1759; d. 1792)

MILLBURY, First (C).

The church was gathered on Oct. 10, 1747 as the Second Church in Sutton, the Second or North Parish having been incorporated in 1743. In 1813, with the creation of the town of Millbury, church and parish took the title First Church and Parish. The Trustees of the Parochial Funds of the Congregational Church and Parish were incorporated in 1828. The parish was dissolved in 1889, following the incorporation of the church the preceding year.¹

The records are owned by the church and deposited with the American Antiquarian Society, Worcester. Not cited below, but useful is the portion of Chaplin's diary published by Henry L. Shumway, "An Old-Time Minister [Ebenezer Chaplin of Sutton Second Parish]," WSAC, V (1882), 44-66.

1. C. C. Goen, Revivalism and Separatism in New England, 1740-1800 (New Haven and London, 1962), p. 316, lists this as a Separate Congregational church.

2. Four more ruling elders were elected after 1805: Oliver Bond in 1809, Deacon Elijah Waters in 1810, Samuel Waters in 1815, and Jonathan Waters in 1829.

PR II - "First Cong'l Church in Millbury, Mass. Records, 1846-1888 ... 2nd Ch. Sutton."

1. At the time of his dismissal from the Sutton pulpit, James Wellman lodged the records with one of his own adherents, rather than turn them over to his successor, Ebenezer Chaplin, whose right to the pastorate he disputed. In 1771-1772, the church made a concerted effort to recover the records from the adherent, who finally sent them to Wellman, by now living in New Hampshire. Wellman was still of no mind to return the records until after Chaplin was dismissed, and not until 1803 did the volume find its way back to Sutton.

CR II, p. 5, claims: "Records 1760 to 1764 in small mem[orandum] book." This item has not survived.

2. The lacuna, 1792-1827, results from history's having repeated itself at the close of the second pastorate. Ebenezer Chaplin, considering himself illegally dismissed, took the second volume of church records with him in 1792. The church therefore gave one of the ruling elders the task of keeping the record of church doings. The original second book found its way back to Sutton (now Millbury) in 1827, at which time then-minister Joseph Goffe transferred the elder's record of vital statistics for the years 1792-1827 into CR II. But Goffe did not think to transcribe from the elder's record any notices of church votes, and the elder's record book was soon afterward lost.

MILLIS, First (C).

The church was gathered on Oct. 7, 1714 as the Church in Medway. In 1748, the town was divided into eastern and western precincts, the former containing the 1714 (First) church, the latter gathering its (Second) church in 1750.¹ In 1885, the East Precinct became the town of Millis, and the First Church in Medway became the (First) Church in Millis. The old parish was incorporated in 1886.

1. The present Medway church still styles itself the Second Church in Medway.

2. Robert T. Swan, "Tenth Report on the Custody and Condition of the Public Records of Parishes, Towns, and Counties" (Public Document No. 52), Public Documents of Massachusetts . . . for the Year 1897 (Boston, 1898), II, 173, reports an extinct Unitarian church under "East Medway," dating from 1715. The basis for Swan's entry lies in a short-lived withdrawal of Unitarians from the 1714 church about 1840; a church was formed, but became extinct before "East Medway" became Millis. Swan's correspondent further obscured the situation by reporting, not the date of the ancient church's gathering (1714), but that of the first minister's ordination (1715).

The confusion is compounded by a recent published report of an extinct East or First Church in Medway. (See Emil Oberholzer, Jr., Delinquent Saints [New York, 1956], p. 347.) The confusion is eliminated once this entry is realized to belong to Millis; moreover, the records survive almost in full, not in the fragmentary form reported by Oberholzer.

MILTON, First Congregational Parish (U).
First (C).

The church was gathered on April 24, 1678; the First Congregational Parish was incorporated in 1818. In 1834, the orthodox withdrew from the church, organizing their own First Evangelical Congregational Church and Society, the First Congregational Parish and Church continuing under Unitarian auspices. Both churches claim the 1678 date.

MONTAGUE, First (C).

The church was gathered on Nov. 22, 1752 as the Church in the Second (North) Precinct of Sunderland,¹ the precinct having been set off in 1751. In 1754, the precinct became the town of Montague, and the church's name was accordingly changed. The First Congregational Society was organized in 1826; in 1910 church and society were incorporated as one body.

Minister: Judah Nash (ord. 1752; d. 1805)

Ruling elders and deacons: due to the absence of early church records, almost nothing is known of the lay officers of this church. A Deacon Mattoon, probably of Sunderland, assumed a leading role in the formation of the Montague church in 1751-1752, but it is not known if he became a member and officer here.

There are no records antedating 1807; the extant records are owned by the church and deposited with a Greenfield bank.

MONTEREY (C).

The church was gathered on Sept. 25, 1750 as the Church in Tyringham, although the town of Tyringham was not incorporated until 1762. The First Congregational Society in Tyringham was incorporated in 1809. In 1847, part of Tyringham was set off as the town of Monterey, and the 1750 church and its society became the First in the new town.¹

NANTUCKET, Occawan (and other) Indian Churches (C), extinct.

The sources do not clearly distinguish the several Nantucket Indian churches from each other, nor carefully discriminate among "churches," "assemblies," "meetinghouses," and "praying towns." It is therefore necessary to treat the island native churches in a single entry.

Tradition assigns the organization of the first Indian church to Hiacoomes, the Vineyard Indian preacher, dating the event ca. 1665-1670. By 1674,¹ there were three praying towns and the one church: Occawan (where the church met), Wammasquid and Squatesit. Indian preacher John Gibbs (Assasammoogh) ministered primarily at Occawan; the other praying towns were served by Indian preachers Joseph, Samuel and Caleb.

By 1694, Nantucket had five native "assemblies" and three churches (one of them Baptist). A report of 1698 adds the names of the Indian preachers then active: Job Muckemuck (successor to the deceased John Gibbs at Occawan), John Asherman, Quequenah, Netowah, Peter Hayt, Wunnohson, Daniel Spotso, Codpoganut and Noah.

Between 1710 and 1718, the native preacher at Occawan was Jonahauwasuit; others associated with this church were Jonas Asosit (Hasaway) ca. 1718 and Benjamin Tarshema ca. 1770. There is reason to believe that Tarshema may have been preceded by Zacchary Hoite. Another (unidentified) Nantucket Indian church was served ca. 1763-1792 by the father and son, James and Joshua Memack. By 1800, the Indian churches of Nantucket were extinct.

See the bibliography on Indian churches, given under BOURNE, Herring Pond(s) Indian Church. See also Obed Macy, The History of Nantucket; Being a Compendious Account of the First Settlement of the Island by the English, together with the Rise and Progress of the Whale Fishery; and Other Historical Facts Relative to Said Island and Its Inhabitants: In Two Parts (Boston, 1835); Robert A. Douglas-Lithgow, Nantucket: A History (New York and London, 1914).

Ministers: prior to the gathering of an Indian church on Nantucket, the natives were ministered to by Thomas Mayhew, Sr., ca. 1665-d. 1681, and John Cotton, Jr., ca. 1665-1667. Both were primarily associated with the Vineyard Indian mission, however.

NANTUCKET, First (C).

The date of the church's gathering is uncertain, although the limited evidence points to the years 1725-1728.¹ In 1725, Timothy White (who had come as S.P.G.F.P. superintendent of religious work among the Indians) was settled as preacher to the English congregation, a post he held until his removal in 1750. Unordained, White depended on the occasional visits of clerics like Rev. Joseph Baxter of Medfield to provide administration of the sacraments. The church reorganized in 1767, at the coming of Rev. Bezaleel Shaw.

The Proprietors of the Meeting House were incorporated in 1811; the church was incorporated in 1895.

NATICK, First Indian Church (C), extinct.

At John Eliot's request, in 1651 the General Court granted a large area in Natick to the Nonantum Indians. The Indians were encouraged to set up a civil government with their own officials, and in 1660 a church was gathered among them.¹ This church was dissolved soon after 1698. 1. Frederick L. Weis, "The New England Company of 1649 and its Missionary Enterprises," CSMP, XXXVIII (1947-1951), 179, holds that the church was furnished with a full complement of clergy and lay officers. In disagreement is Charles E. Banks, The History of Martha's Vineyard, Dukes County, Massachusetts (Boston, 1911), I, p. 245, claiming that only the Vineyard Indian churches had lay officers.

As is the case with all of the Indian churches except Natick's English and Indian church, no records of this church are known to exist or even to have been kept.¹

NATICK, English and Indian Church (C), extinct.

The church was gathered on Dec. 3, 1729 with an eye to accomodating the English now living in Natick, and in place of the extinct Indian church of 1660. The English and Indian church was extinct by 1803.²

2. From a letter of Stephen Badger historians have erroneously concluded that Peabody's church dissolved after his death, to be replaced by a second English and Indian church shortly before Badger's ordination. A careful reading of the letter (MHSC, V [1798], 32-45) does not sustain such a conclusion; Badger's statement that "immediately previous to my settling in this place, a church was gathered," must be read consistently with his reference to Peabody as "my immediate predecessor" (pp. 43, 44). First Congregational Church (C).

The church was gathered in 1708,¹ as the Church of Christ in Dartmouth. Its parish, the Second in Dartmouth, was incorporated in 1747.² In 1787, the Second Parish (sometimes called "Precinct") was made the town of New Bedford, and the church's title was accordingly changed. In 1795, the parish voted to erect a new meetinghouse at New Bedford Village, leaving standing the older meetinghouse at "the Head of the River" (Acushnet). Rev. Samuel West was instructed to divide his time between the constituencies of the two meetinghouses. In 1803, West resigned his post, and no settled ministry was had at the Acushnet meetinghouse from that time until 1828-1829. Meanwhile, Bedford Precinct was incorporated in 1808, embracing the Village and immediate environs. When (in 1810) the orthodox majority of the church withdrew to reorganize and form their own self-sustaining North Congregational Society, the Unitarian party, being a majority of the parish, retained control of the Village meetinghouse, settling a new minister in 1812. The Unitarians' First Congregational Society was incorporated in 1824. In 1828-1829, the remnant of the church living at Acushnet (some four survivors of West's church) reorganized. Today, as the First Congregational Church, this body also lays

NEWBURY, First (C).¹

The church was gathered in 1635, possibly on May 6, at the ordination of the pastor and teacher. The First Precinct

1. The correct identification of the seven churches in this complex requires a brief sketch of the area. The town of Newbury was founded in 1635; its First Church was gathered the same year. A Second Church was gathered in 1698, a Third in 1726, a Fourth in 1731, and a Fifth in 1762.

In 1764, Newburyport was set off as an independent town. The Third Church (1726) in Newbury became Newburyport First; the Fifth Church (1762) in Newbury became Newburyport Second. Two more churches were added in Newburyport prior to 1805: Newburyport Third (1768) and Newburyport Fourth (1793). In 1820, another section of Newbury was made the town of West Newbury. The Second Church (1698) in Newbury became West Newbury First; the Fourth Church (1731) in Newbury became West Newbury Second. After 1820, the only Congregational church in Newbury antedating 1805 was the ancient First Church of 1635.

was incorporated in 1711, and the First Parish in 1725.
The Proprietors of the Meeting House were organized in 1868.

The church records antedating 1674 were reported lost in the Essex North Association's Contributions to the Ecclesiastical History of Essex County (Boston, 1865), pp. 340-345. The manual published at Newbury in 1896 under the title Covenant, Articles of Faith and Rules of the First Church in Newbury, with a Catalogue of Its Members and an Account of Its Pastors, reported the records from 1674 then in existence. Today, however, no records can be found antedating 1943, other than vital statistics extracted from histories and manuals of the church.

The church was gathered on Jan. 12, 1726 as the Third Church in Newbury. When Newburyport became a town (1764), the church took the title of First Church of Newburyport. Its First Religious Society received incorporation in 1794. During the first pastorate, New Light members withdrew to form the First Presbyterian Church in Newburyport.¹ A similar secession in 1768 saw the formation of the Third Church in Newburyport.

NEWBURYPORT, Separate (C), extinct.

The church had its origins in New Light secessions from Newbury's First Church and Third (Newburyport First) Church, the withdrawals commencing in 1742. The secessionists heard the preaching of Joseph Adams for about two years, and then accepted the advice of a New Light ecclesiastical council which culminated in the gathering of a Separate Congregational church on Jan. 3, 1746. In September of 1748, the church voted to place itself under the Boston Presbytery, and thereby ending its career as a Separate Congregational body, became the First Presbyterian Church in Newburyport.

From its organization in 1746, the church mixed congregational and presbyterian elements, gathering the church and installing the pastor independent of any presbytery or council, and while employing ruling elders, insisting on their being elected annually.

NEWBURYPORT, Fifth Church in Newbury (C), extinct.
Bellville Congregational Church (C).

The Fifth Church in Newbury (after 1764, the Second in Newburyport) was gathered on July 22, 1762, the Fifth Parish having been organized the previous year. With Newburyport's becoming a town (1764), the parish became the Fourth in Newbury; when West Newbury was set off in 1820, the parish was designated the Second in Newbury. The church, however, had ceased to meet soon after the resignation of the minister in 1784, and there had been an interim of eight years between the last meeting of the old Fourth Parish in 1800 and the so-called resuscitation of that body in 1808 as the prudential arm of the Bellville Congregational Church organized in the latter year. The argument for continuity emphasizes the fact that no new parish/society was incorporated in 1808, the reorganization of the prudential body resting on the 1761 act of incorporation. Bellville Congregational Church was gathered without the aid of an ecclesiastical council; only one of its constituting¹ members, a woman, had been a member of the 1762 church.¹ In 1853, the area containing the church was annexed to Newburyport.

1. The argument for continuity was urged by Daniel T. Fiske in An Historical Discourse commemorative of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Organization of the Bellville Congregational Church, Newburyport, Mass. Delivered on Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 25, 1858 (Boston, 1859).

Bellville's church records commence with the organization of the church de novo in 1808; proprietors records begin in 1807.

NEWBURYPORT, Third (C), extinct.

The church was gathered by secessionists from the First Church in Newburyport on March 4, 1768, and was known as the Third or North Church in Newburyport, or "the church on Titcomb Street." The Third Religious Society, organized in 1768, received incorporation in 1794.

The church became extinct in 1909, by merging with the Fourth (Prospect Street) Church and the Whitefield Congregational Church to form Central Congregational Church.

NEWBURYPORT, Fourth (C), extinct.

The church was gathered by secessionists from the First Presbyterian Church on May 30, 1793, and was known as the Fourth or Prospect Street or Temple Street Church. The Fourth Religious Society (sometimes denominated the Independent Calvinistic Society) was incorporated in 1794. The church became extinct in 1909, by merging with the Third (Titcomb Street) Church and the Whitefield Congregational Church to form Central Congregational Church. During its early days, the church retained much of the Presbyterian structure of the parent church, but was independent of any presbytery, synod or ecclesiastical judicatory.

NEW SALEM, North Church and Society (C).

The beginnings of this church are obscure, but it appears that it was gathered early in the years between 1802 and 1807 in North New Salem. A meetinghouse erected in the latter year housed its services, although ownership was held by New Salem's First Parish.

The minister of the First Parish supplied here until 1824 when the members withdrew from him (because of his Unitarian sympathies), organized their own Orthodox Society, and styled themselves the Trinitarian Congregational Church. Neighboring Congregational ministers supplied the pulpit from 1825 to 1842, Baptists and others from 1842 to 1847.¹ The site of the meetinghouse, meanwhile, had been changed. A Methodist church was formed in North New Salem in 1867, absorbing many of the members of the Trinitarian Congregational Church, and Methodists supplied the pulpit of the meetinghouse until 1879, when the Methodist church was disbanded and as many of its members as were willing were transferred to the Methodist church in Orange.

Some members, however, considered themselves still members of the Trinitarian Congregational Church, and after a brief time, acquired the supply services of the ministers of Orange's Central Congregational Church, an arrangement which continued until 1949. In 1902-1903, the present North Congregational Society was organized and recognized by an ecclesiastical council. Ministers of Orange's Mission Covenant Church supplied here from 1949 until 1961, when the church settled its first resident Congregational minister.

No ruling elders appear to have been employed here, nor any deacons elected until 1903.

Except for fragmentary society records, there are no records antedating 1961. The extant records are owned and held by the church.

NEWTON, First (C).

The church was gathered on July 20, 1664 in the area variously called Nonantum, Cambridge Village and New Cambridge, in 1691 incorporated as the town of Newton. The First Parish was organized in 1664, and the Proprietors of the Meeting House in 1860. The parish was dissolved before the incorporation of the church in 1895.

NORFOLK, Federated (C).

The church was gathered on June 16, 1798 as the North Church in Wrentham, its personnel having seceded from Wrentham First Church. The North Society, organized in 1795, was incorporated in 1799, and reincorporated as the North Parish Congregational Funding Society. In 1832, the Cleaveland Religious Society was incorporated, the two societies continuing side by side until the church received incorporation on June 24, 1889. The federation with other local religious bodies took place in 1918.

Minister: John Cleaveland, Jr. (ord. 1798; d. 1815)

Ruling elders and deacons: the loss of the early records accounts for the dearth of information regarding lay officers of this church. Among those prominent in the separation that led to the gathering of the Norfolk church were Wrentham deacons Thomas Mann and Jacob Pond. In 1795 they were summarily dismissed from the Wrentham diaconate and then, in an attempt at healing the separation, offered the opportunity to resume their duties in the parent church. Whether Mann (who died in 1807) and Pond (who died in 1815) accepted these terms, or whether they continued at Norfolk, is unknown.¹

Several fires between 1798 and 1961 have destroyed many of the church's records; those extant are owned and held by the church.

NORTH BROOKFIELD (C).

The church was gathered as the Second Church in Brookfield on May 28, 1752, the Second (North) Precinct having been incorporated in 1750. The precinct became the town of North Brookfield in 1812. The First Congregational Society in North Brookfield was incorporated in 1839, by which time the church had taken the name, First Congregational Church. The Society was dissolved at the incorporation of the church in 1926.

NORTH NEW SALEM (see New Salem, North, Orange).

NORTH ORANGE (C), extinct.

The church was gathered on Nov. 14, 1782 as the Congregational Church in South Warwick. The following year, this part of Warwick became the town of Orange. In 1784, the Congregational Society was incorporated (act repealed in 1791), and so were the Trustees of the Society. In 1811, having been without a settled ministry since 1790, the Congregationalists voted to let an unidentified local "Universalist Society" use the meetinghouse when not being used by themselves.

In 1822, the surviving church members settled a Unitarian minister, John Chandler; they dismissed him in 1827. The trend toward Unitarianism being firmly established, in 1844 members merged with local Universalists to form "The First Congregational Parish and Society." The latter tradition came so to predominate that in 1868, this body's name was₁ changed to "The Second Universalist Society of Orange."

In 1878, this Society merged with the "Third Congregational Church" (founded in 1843) to form "The Universalist Congregational Community Church of North Orange and Tully," still in existence today.

NORTH READING (C).
(Universalist), extinct.

Reading was settled in 1639, and its (First) church was gathered in 1645.

In 1713, the residents of northern Reading successfully petitioned to become a separate precinct, taking the title of the Precinct on the North Side of Ipswich River and Sadlor's Rock. Reading's Second Church was gathered in this precinct on June 29, 1720, and it is with this church that we now have to do.²

In 1853, the northern precinct was incorporated as the town of North Reading, carrying with it the 1720 church. The church became known as the First Church of North

2. To briefly summarize the history of Reading's other churches: in 1770, the settlers of southern Reading gathered their own church, Reading's Third (West), the parish similarly designated being incorporated as a society in 1828.

When the remainder of Reading (exclusive of North Reading) was divided in 1868 into the towns of Reading and Wakefield, the former municipality carried with it the 1770 church and the latter the ancient church of 1645.

Reading. About 1802, the parish being predominantly Universalist, organized its own church, but neither parish nor its church long survived.

The continuing Congregational church absorbed a local Methodist church in 1892, and took the name Union Congregational Church, incorporating under that title in 1923.

The church was gathered on Aug. 11, 1748 by persons dissatisfied with the autocratic ways and Old Light doctrine of Norton pastor Joseph Avery.

On Jan. 9, 1761, the church's officers administered the first recorded baptism by immersion, marking its entrance upon its Baptist phase; the church voted itself Baptist on March 24, 1761.

Its later history can be briefly told: in 1769, it merged with the Taunton Baptist Society. In 1822, the meeting-house became the center of Freewill Baptist activities, the original Calvinistic Baptists dissolving their "First Baptist Church of Taunton" in 1835, and immediately gathering "The First Baptist Church of Norton."

NUKKEHKUMMEES Indian Congregational Church (see Dartmouth, Nukkehkummees Indian Congregational Church).

OAK BLUFFS, Sanchacantacket¹ Indian Church (C), extinct.

It would appear that this church, gathered in 1659,² was the first Indian church gathered in Massachusetts.² Its original location was northwest of Edgartown, an area now lying in the township of Oak Bluffs.

In 1670, the Rev. Messrs. John Cotton, Jr. and John Eliot, together with Gov. Thomas Mayhew, assisted the Indian congregation in electing and installing native officers. These included Hiacoomes as pastor, John Tackanash as teacher, John Nohnoso and Joshua Momatchegin as ruling elders, and Kestumin as deacon.

However, the Indians who lived on Chappaquiddick Island just east of the Vineyard found the frequent channel crossings hazardous, and in 1675, the Sanchacantacket church was divided into two independent churches. Hiacoomees and Joshua Momatchegin were assigned to Chappaquiddick; John Tackanash (pastor), John Nohnoso (ruling elder) and one Lazarus or Kokesap (deacon) remained at Sanchacantacket. In 1683 because of Hiacoomes' growing feeble, the two churches were reunited, but parted again after his death in 1690, each to go its own separate way until becoming extinct early in the nineteenth century. The last notice of the Sanchacantacket church is dated ca. 1806. See the bibliography on Indian churches, given under BOURNE, Herring Pond(s) Indian Church.

1. Various given as "Sanchekantacket" or "Sengekontaket."

2. Frederick L. Weis, "The New England Company of 1649 and its Missionary Enterprises," CSMP, XXXVIII (1947-1951), 183, thinks the first Massachusetts Indian church was located on Chappaquiddick Island (cf. EDGARTOWN, Chappaquiddick Indian Church) and assigns it the 1659 date. However, a careful reading of the letters written by John Cotton, Jr. and Thomas Mayhew, Sr. ca. 1674 (MHSC, 1st Ser., I [1792, rep. 1806], Ch. ix) suggests that the usually reliable Weis erred at this point, and that the first gathered Indian church was indeed located at Sanchacantacket.

As is the case with all of the Indian churches except Natick, no records of this church are known to exist or even to have been kept.

OAKHAM (C).

Originally known as Rutland West Wing, in 1759 this area became a precinct, and in 1762, was incorporated as the town of Oakham.

The Irish Presbyterian population for some years worshipped with the Rutland Presbyterians (seceders from the ministry of Rev. Thomas Frink), but on Aug. 28, 1767 gathered a Presbyterian church in Oakham.

Difficulties with the first minister saw the town voting

(in the capacity of a society) to adopt Congregational principles in 1772; the next year, the minister resigned. Although there is no record of the old church's having been dissolved, it was reorganized by act of ecclesiastical council on June 23, 1773.

Tension between the liberal and orthodox wings of the church saw a division early in the nineteenth century. The pastor resigned his parish responsibilities in 1828, but continued to minister to the orthodox (under the title of "The Evangelical Congregational Society") as senior pastor until his death in 1842. The liberal element settled no minister, although it met occasionally as a society. In 1829 the orthodox settled a junior pastor, and when he resigned because of ill health in 1832, provided a successor whose ministry was so acceptable to the liberals that the two parties were reunited, the original society being assimilated into the younger organization.

	Daniel Tomlinson	(ord. 1786; res. and disp. 1828; continued to minister until d. 1842)

Ruling elders: although the church must have had such officers during its Presbyterian phase, no record of that period is extant.

Deacons:	James Dean	(ca. 1767-1773)
	----- White	(ca. 1767-1773)
	Jesse Allen	(e. 1773; d. 1816)
	Jonathan Fitts	(e. 1776; d. 1792)
	Samuel Davis	(e. 1793; d. 1817)

No records of the Presbyterian phase of the church's history survive; the extant records are owned by the church, and deposited at the Town Hall.

ORLEANS, Federated (C).

The original church in the area was that gathered at Nauset in Eastham in 1646. In 1718, a more commodious house of worship was erected in southern Eastham (now Orleans), and in the following year, the southern and northern parts of the town were made into distinct precincts. The minister of the old church elected to serve the South Church in Eastham, and it is with this church that we have to do.¹ In 1797, Orleans was made a town, and the church's name was changed to the First Church in Orleans. Similarly, the parish (organized in 1719) exchanged the title "South Congregational Parish in Eastham" for "Congregational Parish in Orleans."

In 1938, this church federated with a local Universalist body (gathered in 1833), and in 1939 took the name "Federated Church of Orleans."

Ministers:	John Mayo	(sett. 1646; rem. 1655; d. 1676)
	Thomas Crosby	(sett. 1655-1670 as "religious teacher," probably unord.; d. 1702)

	Joseph Crocker	(ord. 1739; d. 1772)
	Jonathan Bascom	(ord. 1772; d. 1807)

Ruling elders: there being no extant records antedating 1772, it is not known if the church employed ruling elders before that time. None are recorded after 1772.

Deacons: John Paine² (m. 1695-1718)

[OTIS (C).]

In 1806, a society was organized under the name of the United Congregational Society in Bethlehem and Loudon; this body absorbed the survivors of the second Loudon church and the Bethlehem church. In 1810, the present Congregational Church of Otis was covenanted; it settled its first minister in 1815.

This church claims unbroken succession from the second Loudon church, and therefore all the records it owns and holds are cited below. However, the records themselves testify to a beginning de novo in 1810.

OXFORD, French Huguenot, extinct.

The French Huguenot church at Oxford was gathered in 1686 by some thirty refugee families who had migrated to America after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685. The massacre of one family by Indians in 1696 prompted them to abandon the town, most of them settling in Boston. A second attempt at settling Oxford was made in 1699, but failed by 1713.

Ministers: Daniel Bondet (ord. in the Church of England; sett. here 1686; rem. to Boston 1694; d. 1722)

James Labourie (sett. 1699; rem. to New York City 1704; d. 1734)

Ruling elders and deacons: due to the lack of records, little is known of the lay officers of this church. A petition of the Oxford Huguenots, asking the Boston congregation for financial aid in 1700, is signed by "elders of the French congregation" Peter Chardon and Rene Grignon. Another elder, possibly, was Jean Millet.

It has long been assumed that any records of this church were taken away by Rev. Bondet in 1694. See A. [PALMER, Thorndike (C), inactive.]

Traditionally, it is held that this church, originally Presbyterian, was gathered in 1730 in what was then known as "the Elbow Settlement." However, one document in the State Archives reports that when the first minister was ordained in 1734, "in sd Plantation at the sd time there was no gathered church."¹

The church continued under the jurisdiction of the Londonderry Presbytery, erecting a new meetinghouse in what is now Palmer Center in 1798. Ca. 1811, the transition from Presbyterian to Congregational polity was effected, and in 1831, the First Parish was officially organized. In 1847, the old (First) parish transferred its center of activity to the village of Thorndike, and a Second Parish and Church were created at Depot Village. Due to the closing of the Thorndike Mills, the First Church and Parish were unable to support a resident minister after 1925. In 1929, this church and parish incorporated as a single entity, and soon after became an adjunct of the Union Evangelical Church (gathered in 1870) at the village of Three Rivers. It continues today as an inactive church, reporting a half-dozen members.

PAXTON, Second (C), extinct.

The church was gathered in 1785, by some twenty persons who objected to the settlement of John Foster over the First Church and Parish. In 1793, on the advice of a mutually-invited ecclesiastical council, the two churches were reunited as the First Church.

No records of the Second Church are known to exist. See D. Hamilton Hurd (ed.), History of Worcester County, Massachusetts with Biographical Sketches of Many of Its Pioneers and Prominent Men (Philadelphia, 1889), pp. 568-584.

PEABODY, South (C).

The church was gathered on Sept. 23, 1713 as the Third Church in Salem. It was located in the Middle Precinct in Salem, previously incorporated in 1710.

In 1752 the area was ceded to the town of Danvers. The parochial organization was reorganized as the South Parish in Danvers, and the church took the name of the Second (South) Parish Church in Danvers. The parish was dissolved in 1793, being replaced by the Proprietors of the South Meeting House in the South Precinct of Danvers.

In 1868 the precinct became the town of Peabody, and the church took the title of South Church in Peabody, sometimes called "The Old South Church."

[PELHAM (C).]

The church was gathered as a Presbyterian church between 1737 and 1744; its (First) parish was organized in 1786. Early in the 1820's, the minister declared for Congregationalism, and by 1837 the church had abandoned Presbyterianism.¹ In that latter year, the church was reorganized as the Evangelical Congregational Church. The parish became the Congregational Society by virtue of reorganization in 1862. The present United Church of Pelham is descended from the old town church, having passed through two successive federations in 1936 and 1959.

	Richard Crouch Graham	(ord. 1763; d. 1771)
	Nathaniel Merrill	(inst. 1775; rem. 1781- 1783; d. 1791)
	Thomas F. Oliver ²	(ord. 1782 ?; disp. and rem. n.d.; d. 1797)

1. A short-lived (1822-1827) Calvinistic Church was gathered in protest against the minister's conversion to Congregationalism.

2. The oldest evidence indicates that these are the correct dates for Rev. Oliver (Harvard, Class of 1775).

However, Parmenter, op. cit., claims that the Oliver in the case was William Oliver, ord. 1793, disp. 1804. Earlier, in History of the Connecticut Valley in Massachusetts, with Illustrations and Biographical Sketches of Some of Its Prominent Men and Pioneers (Philadelphia, 1879), I, 554, the list of ministers cited as Merrill's successor one Andrew Oliver, called in 1792, disp. 1804, and claimed his successor, Elijah Brainard, was ord. 1805 and disp. 1811. Listings of Dartmouth College Alumni, however, do not place Brainard at Pelham until about 1811 (he d. 1828).

Ruling elders and deacons: due to the lack of any records antedating the twentieth century, little is known of this church's lay officers. Parish records extant in 1898 mentioned Deacons Ebenezer Gray and Nathaniel Sampson in 1799, and a Deacon Thompson in 1806.

C. O. Parmenter, History of Pelham, Mass. from 1738 to 1898 including the Early History of Prescott (Amherst, 1898), remarked the loss of all records for the Presbyterian period, and the destruction by fire in 1890 of the church's nineteenth century records.

The church was gathered on Jan. 29, 1746/47; with the incorporation of the parish in 1831, it became known as the Church of the First Parish. At the same time, the orthodox withdrew, and formed their own church and society.

In 1912, the Unitarian and Congregational bodies entered into a federation with a local Methodist church. However, the Methodists did not participate in the organic fusion of the two older churches, which took place in 1919, and from which the present Community Church derives.

PLYMOUTH, First Parish (U).

The probable date of this church's covenanting is early in 1606/07, the place being Scrooby, England. Its members' migration, first to Amsterdam, thence to Leyden, and the subsequent voyage of the Pilgrim contingent to the New World requires to rehearsal here.

As far as can be determined, no new act of covenanting was undertaken after the Pilgrims' arrival at New Plymouth. Instead, it was agreed that the Leyden and Plymouth congregations would each constitute a complete church, independent of one another. Therefore, the American history of the Pilgrim church can be said to have begun on Dec. 16, 1620 (O.S.), the day on which the Mayflower's passengers disembarked at Plymouth.¹

The several divisions of the town into precincts and the gathering of later churches explains the various names given to the parent church and its associated precinct/parish.² In 1717, a North Precinct was set off, and a church gathered there in 1720; in 1726, the area became the town of Kingston. Meanwhile, the area containing the parent church took the title "South Precinct," and in 1723 held its first precinct meeting. When Kingston became a separate town, however, the "South Precinct" changed its own designation to "North Precinct."

A second church was gathered at Manomet in 1738, but its associated precinct (called "the Second" or "Manomet Ponds") was not fully incorporated until 1810.

In 1744, Old Light dissidents seceded from the parent

1. Once the New England experiment got under way, a third factor came to take its place beside matter and form as elements requisite for the constituting of a particular church. While not so stated explicitly, location was considered so important that the church at Scituate-Barnstable (see BARNSTABLE, West) took its relocation in the New World to be a beginning de novo, even though its members here were some of the same folk who had joined in church estate at Southwark, England, in 1616. Similarly, the church begun at Chelmsford in 1655 was there constituted de novo, even though most of its members were the covenanted members of a church gathered a few years earlier at Wenham.

2. While not critical in the sequence of events described here, it should be noted that in 1695 a West Precinct (later Plympton) was set off, and a church gathered there some three years later.

church, gathered a Third Church and apparently organized a Third Precinct. This Separate church rejoined the parent body in 1783, and the year following, the two precincts were united as the First Precinct.

A more amicable separation took place in 1801, the new church taking the abandoned title of "Third Church," and its prudential body (organized the following year) becoming known as the "Third Society."¹

The church of 1620 continues today, the oldest of the Pilgrim-Puritan churches on this continent. The Trustees of its Fuller Ministerial Fund received incorporation in 1835.

Ministers:	William Brewster ²	(e. ruling elder at Leyden ca. 1610; ruling elder at Plymouth 1620-d. 1643; acting minister at Plymouth 1620-1629, at Duxbury 1632-1637)

1. In 1852, the names were changed to "The Church and Society of the Pilgrimage."

2. The infamous John Lyford preached at Plymouth in 1624-1625, but was banished as "an enemy of the plantation." In 1628, a young man named Rogers appeared as a candidate, but was shipped back to England, being judged "Crased in his braine."

3. During the years 1631-1634, Smith was assisted by Rev. Roger Williams, who next served at Salem. John Norton served as assistant in 1635-1636, before settling at Ipswich. Neither assistant appears to have been settled at Plymouth.

4. The church attempted to secure as teacher to Rayner's pastor, Rev. Charles Chauncy, who preached at Plymouth 1638-1640, and then settled at Scituate. Apparently, Chauncy was never settled at Plymouth. During the years 1654-1669, the church relied on the ministrations of ruling elder Thomas Cushman and the supply preaching of James Williams and William Brinsmead.

PLYMOUTH, Third (C), extinct.

The church was gathered on Nov. 7, 1744 by Old Light secessionists from Plymouth's First Church. A precinct was apparently organized to sustain the Third Church. In 1783, this Separate church rejoined the parent body, and the next year, the First and Third Precincts were united as the First Precinct.

PLYMOUTH, Pilgrimage (C).

The church was gathered on Oct. 1, 1801 as the Third Church in Plymouth, and the Third Congregational Society received incorporation in 1802. In 1852, the society's name was changed to the Society of the Pilgrimage, and the church adopted the title, the Church of the Pilgrimage, in 1870.

1. PLYMOUTH, First, CR PUB, 356, makes mention under date of July 10, 1777, of one "Deacon Diman of the 3d Church, who constantly meets with us," and records that Diman was asked by the First Church to exercise his diaconal powers in their midst as occasion might demand. It is conceivable that Deacon Diman was the same Jonathan Diman who was elected a deacon by the First Church in 1784.

The society was dissolved at the incorporation of the church in 1890.

[PRESCOTT (C), extinct.]

The Second (East) Parish in Pelham was incorporated in 1786. By 1792, a church had been gathered there under Presbyterian auspices. Membership steadily declined, however, and after 1809 the church was unable to support a settled minister. In 1823, it was voted to adopt Congregational polity. The parish was reorganized at this time, and took the name, "First Congregational Society."

The society was dissolved at the incorporation of the church in 1914. When plans for the creation of the Quabbin Reservoir (involving the destruction of Prescott and neighboring towns) became known, the church noted itself out of existence (June 24, 1928), and its building was moved to South Hadley to house the Skinner Museum.

Minister: Matthias Cazier¹ (inst. 1794; dism. 1798; d. 1837)

Ruling elders and deacons: in the absence of early church records, the only lay officers whose names have survived are deacons Patrick McMillen and Daniel Grey.

There are no church records for the Presbyterian phase of the church's history. The extant records are owned and held by the American Antiquarian Society, Worcester, unless otherwise noted.

PRINCETON (C).

The church was gathered on Aug. 12, 1764. In 1816, disagreement over the choice of a new minister led to a twenty-year separation. When the church three times rejected the liberal candidate proposed by the town, the town (on the advice of an ecclesiastical council) settled him and with a remnant of the church proceeded to his ordination.

The disaffected majority of the church seceded, and formed a church under the auspices of the Newburyport Presbytery. In 1830, finding the expenses of Presbyterianism too burdensome, this church voted to adopt Congregational polity, and adopted the title of Evangelical Congregational Church. By 1836 there were no further barriers to the unification of the Unitarian and Congregational contingents, and a merger was effected under the names, Union Congregational Church and First Parish.

PROVINCETOWN (C), extinct.

The church was gathered in 1714,¹ but became virtually extinct during the 1740's, due to a sudden decrease in the population of the town. It was reorganized in 1769, and then was again forced to close its doors in 1830. Revived in 1841, it maintained a somewhat uncertain existence until extinguished a third time in 1950.

Ministers: Samuel Spear (sett. 1717; rem. 1741; d. 1748)
 Samuel Parker (ord. 1774; d. 1811)

Ruling elders and deacons: lacking any records, it is impossible to say who might have been the church's lay officers.

It was reported in 1889 that the earliest extant records dated from 1769;² however, these documents were destroyed by fire prior to 1914.

QUINCY, United First Parish (U).

In 1640 the town of Braintree was incorporated, encompassing present-day Braintree, Quincy, Randolph and Holbrook. The Quincy area ("Mount Wollaston") was selected as the site of the original church, gathered on Sept. 16, 1639.

In 1708 Old Braintree was divided into duly incorporated precincts, the North (Quincy) and the South (Braintree), and the ancient church remained located in the North Precinct. When Quincy was set off as a town in 1792, the name of the 1639 church and parish was duly changed to the First Parish Church in Quincy.

In 1959, the First Parish Church merged with the Wollaston Unitarian Society to form the United First Parish Church.

John Adams	(e. 1747; d. 1761)

1. A ruling elder John Penniman is mentioned in CR I, under date of 1683, but it seems doubtful that he was an officer of the Quincy church.

2. In the absence of records antedating the church's early years and in the face of the thinness of the extant records, this list has been compiled from such records as do exist and from Daniel M. Wilson (ed.), The "Chappel of Ease" and Church of Statesmen. Commemorative Services at the Completion of Two Hundred and Fifty Years Since the Gathering of the First Church of Christ in Quincy (Cambridge, 1890).

3. Sometimes given as "Parmenter."

READING (C).

Reading was settled in 1639, and its (First) church was gathered in 1645.

In 1713, the residents of northern Reading successfully petitioned to become a separate precinct, taking the title of the Precinct on the North Side of Ipswich River and Sadlor's Rock. Reading's Second Church was gathered in this precinct in 1720.

On Feb. 21, 1770, the settlers of southern Reading were permitted to gather their own church, Reading's Third, and it is with this church we now have to do. Its parish took the designation "Third" or "West," and made the transition to the status of a society in 1828, receiving incorporation as the Third Congregational Society in that year.

A dispute over church discipline in 1849 saw a number of the members of the Third Church withdrawing to form the Bethesda Congregational Church; those continuing as the Third Church styled themselves "the Old South Church." The Old South Parish was incorporated in 1880.

In 1853, the northern precinct was made the town of North Reading, and carried with it the 1720 church. At this point, the 1770 (Old South) church and parish became known as "the Second (South) in Reading."

The remainder of old Reading was divided in 1868 into the towns of Reading and Wakefield. Wakefield carried with it the 1645 church, Reading the 1770 church. In 1886 Bethesda and (Old) South merged as the First Church of Reading, settling in the building formerly used by Bethesda Church.¹

REHOBOTH (C).

The church was gathered on Nov. 29, 1721 as the Second Church in Rehoboth.¹ It soon became known locally as the Palmer's River Church. The Second Precinct was organized about 1759, and the Trustees of the Second Precinct/Parish received incorporation in 1761.

In 1792, two acts of incorporation were passed by the state legislature, the one naming the Catholick Congregational Church and Society in the Second Precinct in the town of Rehoboth as a corporate body, the other recognizing as a distinct entity the Trustees of the same church and society. In 1848, the church and society were once again incorporated, and until about 1930, bore the title "Catholick Congregational." In the latter year, the term "Catholick" was dropped.

1. The First Church, gathered in 1643, was located in that section of Rehoboth which in 1812 was set off as the town of Seekonk. Then, in 1862, a part of Seekonk (including the territory served by the First Church) was ceded to Rhode Island, and became part of East Providence.

Ministers: John Paine (ord. 1748; rem. 1751 ?)
Samuel Peck (ord. 1751; d. 1788)

Ruling elders and deacons: nothing is known of the lay officers of this church.

[REHOBOTH, South (C), extinct.]

The early history of this church is closely interwoven with that of Rehoboth's several Baptist churches, although when it was gathered on Jan. 20, 1773, it was established on open communion principles.¹

By 1796, this open communion church was² worshipping jointly with John Hix's "Fifth Baptist Church," and early in the nineteenth century the two churches appear to have become one, taking the name of "The First Christian Church," which in due time was renamed in consequence of the Congregational-Christian merger of 1931. The church, after several years of inactivity, became extinct in 1964.

Minister: Jacob Hix³ (ord. 1773; d. 1809)

Ruling elders and deacons: nothing is known of the lay officers of this church.

1. Frederick L. Weis, The Colonial Clergy and The Colonial Churches of New England (Lancaster, Mass., 1936), p. 268, lists this as the "Seventh Baptist Church," although its minister never became a Baptist.

REVERE, First (U), extinct.

The church was gathered on Oct. 19, 1715 as the Church at Rumney Marsh, an area which in 1739 became part of the newly-created town of Chelsea. The First Church and Parish in 1846 became known as the First Church and Parish in North Chelsea; in 1871, North Chelsea was set off as the town of Revere, and church and parish were duly renamed. The First Unitarian Society received incorporation in 1888, but shortly thereafter both society and church became extinct.

1. The elections of Samuel Tuttle and William Hassey to the diaconate in 1720 were voided by the church later the same year; nine years later, Hassey was again elected.

Certain of the church records were published by Mellen Chamberlain in his A Documentary History of Chelsea including the Boston Precincts of Winnisimmet, Rumney Marsh, and Pullen Point, 1624-1824 (Boston, 1908), two vols. However, the baptismal and death notices are taken out of context and relegated to an appendix, all notices of ecclesiastical councils are omitted, and the running records of church disciplinary proceedings are abbreviated with names frequently being wholly omitted.

ROADTOWN, Church (see Shutesbury).

ROCHESTER, First (C).

The church was gathered on Oct. 13, 1703. The town was organized in 1686, and its people had been successively ministered to by Samuel Shiverick (1683-1687) and Samuel Arnold, Jr. (1687-1703; ord. 1703; d. 1709).

Three precincts were set off in turn, the second (1736) eventually becoming Mattapoisett, the third (1791) what is now called "North Rochester," and the fourth (1798) present-day Marion.

The minister ordained at Rochester First in 1799 served the two congregations of one church until 1827, when, on the advice of an ecclesiastical council, the church was divided into two distinct bodies. The minister of the 1703 church chose to remain at Marion; the man who was to have been his colleague was ordained to serve Rochester First Church. By terms of the division, the records (and continuity) were to remain at Rochester, and a copy of the records to be provided the Marion church. The Marion church further agreed to take the name "South Church" rather than "First Church," the latter title belonging to the Rochester body,¹ although that church more frequently employed the name "Center Church." The Proprietors of the Meeting House were organized in 1837. The old parish was dissolved in 1946, at the time of the church's incorporation.

Ministers: Samuel Arnold, Jr. (sett. 1687; ord. 1703; d. 1709)
 Timothy Ruggles (ord. 1710; d. 1768)
 Jonathan Moore (ord. 1768; dism. 1792; d. 1814)²
 Oliver Cobb, D.D. (ord. 1799, serving congregations here and at Marion; rem. to Marion 1827; d. 1849)

Ruling elders: none.

Deacons: Abraham Holmes (e. 1703)
 John Freeman (e. 1729 ?; m. 1732; dism.)
 Roger Haskell (e. 1729 ?; dism. 1739)
 Elisha Freeman (e. 1739; m. 1757)
 Ebenezer Hamlin (e. 1739; dism. 1739-1740)
 Samuel Winslow (e. 1740 ?)
 James Foster (e. 1748; m. 1770)
 John Winslow (e. 1748; suspended 1751; res. 1752)
 Seth Dexter (e. 1752; m. 1787)
 Richard Church, Jr. (e. 1774)

1. Apparently the records were allocated in direct contradiction to the terms of the agreement. This may have inclined Frederick L. Weis to present his data for Rochester First Church under Marion. See The Colonial Clergy and The Colonial Churches of New England (Lancaster, Mass., 1936), p. 258.

2. Isaac Backus, A [Church] History of New England, III (Boston, 1796), pp. 75ff., remarks that upon being dismissed for "gross immoralities," Moore led a separation from the church which lasted some thirty months.

James Foster, 2nd	(e. 1776; suspended 1791, re-instated; res. 1799; d. 1811)

ROCHESTER, North (C).

The church was gathered in 1753 as the Third (North) Church in Rochester, although the Third Precinct was not set off

1. History and Manual of the First Congregational Church Rochester, Mass. 1703 1909 (n.p., 1909) notes that Samuel Arnold, Jr., son of the first minister, is frequently termed "Deacon Arnold" in old documents, and that a Deacon Whiteridge is similarly mentioned in 1780.

until 1791.¹ In 1793 the latter body was incorporated as the Congregational Precinct in Rochester, Middleborough, and Freetown. The Proprietors of the Congregational Meeting House had organized in 1791; in 1825 they were superceded by the newly-incorporated Trustees of the Third Congregational Precinct in Rochester, Middleborough and Freetown. The North Rochester Congregational Church was incorporated in 1891.

ROWE (U), extinct.

The church was gathered in 1770 as the Church in Myrifiield, an area which in 1785 was made the town of Rowe. The First Congregational Society was organized in 1832, and reorganized as the First Congregational Unitarian Society in 1882 when the church took the name of First Congregational Unitarian Church.

The church and society became extinct in recent years, its land and building becoming the property of the Rowe Unitarian Camp Corporation.

Thomas Barnard, minister here from 1755 to 1776, remarked that the early church records, 1629-1660, were missing at the time of his installation. However, he apparently either did not know of or did not count the Fiske records of 1637-1640. And to some extent the lacuna can be filled by the reports of Winthrop and other contemporaries of the Salem congregation's early years.

The extant records are divided between the church and the Essex Institute, Salem; items held by the latter repository are designated by an asterisk (*).

SALEM, Second (U), extinct.

Long-standing concern for the creation of a second parish in eastern Salem took organizational form in 1717, when the "East Parish" opened its first book of records. Within a year, a meetinghouse had been erected, and the Proprietors of the Meeting House in the East Parish had come into being. Further impetus was provided in 1718 by the settlement of Samuel Fiske as pastor of the old Salem church, inasmuch as dissatisfaction with Fiske was apparently localized here in the East Parish. On Dec. 25, 1718, the old church granted dismissions to those persons in its east parish who wished to gather their own church, and so shortly thereafter, the Second (East) Church came into being.² In 1954-1956, the small surviving membership of the Second Church was absorbed by the First Church.

1. At some point during the years 1817-1862, independent society records were begun, but the early volume(s ?) have dropped from sight.

2. Some authorities date the church's gathering on Nov. 14, 1718, but we suspect that that is the day on which the body known as the Proprietors was organized.

SALEM, Third (Tabernacle) Church (C).¹

Samuel Fiske's authoritarian ways as pastor of Salem's First Church provoked a minority of that church's membership to first invoke the aid of an ecclesiastical council and then to obtain legislative aid, the effect of which was Fiske's dismissal in 1735 from the ministry of the First Church. Fiske and his supporters, however, continued to meet and for the next twenty years styled themselves "the First Church."¹ It appears that the Fiske faction considered April 18, 1735 the date of their formal separation from their antagonists.

Fiske's successor, Dudley Leavitt, alienated many of the Fiske party. These returned to the ancient church in sufficient numbers so that by 1755, the parent body could claim a majority of the church membership that had existed in 1735. Therefore, in 1755 the ancient church voted to "take on them in all the public transactions the title of the First church of Salem."

The Fiske church voted in 1762 to surrender the title of "First Church" in exchange for a portion of the church plate and lands, and henceforth to be known as "The Third Church of Salem."² Before 1800, it had become popularly known as Tabernacle Church.

The Proprietors twice received incorporation, in 1781 as "The Proprietors of the Meeting House and Land where the Reverend Doctor Nathaniel Whitaker now preaches," and in 1834 as "The Proprietors of the Tabernacle Church."

SALEM, South (C), extinct.

The church was gathered on Feb. 14, 1775 by persons separating from the Third (now Tabernacle) Church of Salem. The church of 1775, however, by virtue of the advice of an ex parte council styled itself the "Third Church," and continued to claim that title until the close of the 19th century. The Proprietors of the New South Meeting House received incorporation in 1805, and were reincorporated as the Proprietors of the South Church in Salem in 1838. In 1924, the 1775 church merged with Salem's Tabernacle Church, under the name of the latter body.

SALEM, Branch or Howard Street Church (C/P/C), extinct.

The Branch Church was gathered on Dec. 29, 1803, by persons who had left Salem's Tabernacle Church when Rev. Joshua Spaulding was dismissed from his pastorate there. From 1815 to 1828, the church was statedly Presbyterian, receiving incorporation as such in 1824. In 1828, it returned to Congregational principles, was reincorporated and its name changed to the Howard Street Church. The Branch Society had been incorporated in 1805. The last settled minister left in 1864, and the church buildings and lands were auctioned off in 1867.

Minister: Joshua Spaulding (inst. 1805; res. 1814; d. 1825)

Deacons: Daniel Farrington (m. 1803; rem. 1812; d. 1813)¹

SALISBURY, First (C), extinct.

The church was gathered in 1638. A second center of population eventually developed in the western part of the town, so that in 1714 the town voted to support two meetinghouses (each with its own minister) while maintaining a single parish. The 1638 church became known as the "First (or East) Church in Salisbury," while the "Second Church" was that gathered in 1718 in what is now the Rocky Hill section of Amesbury.¹

In 1787, the ministers of both churches pressed the town for adjustments in their salaries, the currency being greatly depreciated at this time. In 1790, the town voted to dismiss the First Church pastor, Edmund Noyes, and proceeded (quite unsuccessfully) to invite candidates to fill his place. Noyes evidently refused to recognize his dismissal, and continued to minister at Salisbury until his death in 1809.

By 1802, Methodism had become so dominant in the First Church area that the church voted to allow the use of the meetinghouse to the Methodists half of the time. In 1807 this was changed to allow the Methodists full-time use of the building. Finally, in 1833, the Congregationalists sold the church properties to the Methodists, and as many as could in₂ conscience do so, became members of the Methodist church.²

1. The Rocky Hill area became part of Amesbury in 1886.

2. Those unwilling to become Methodists affiliated with Congregational churches in Newburyport.

The parish, known as the First or East Parish of Salisbury, had been incorporated in 1793; it continued through the change of denominations, and operates today under Methodist auspices.

The exact date of the church's gathering is uncertain, but it can be said that as early as the fall of 1737 or as late as Dec. 5, 1739, it was organized as the Third Church in Lynn. The Proprietors of the Meeting House had been organized in 1736. A petition to be set off as a distinct parish, filed Oct. 25, 1737, was denied by the General Court, but permission was granted to the petitioners to hold worship apart from the First and Second Churches. Not until 1749 was the forming of an independent parish authorized. Lynn's ancient church had been gathered in 1632, and its Second Church in 1720. In 1782, the Second Parish was incorporated as the town of Lynnfield, and the Third Church and Parish were designated the Second or West in Lynn. In 1815, the latter area became the town of Saugus, and the parish and church received the title, "First." From 1817 to 1836, lack of financial support prompted the parish to vote freedom of the pulpit to any minister who would preach without cost to the parish. Unitarian, and then Universalist preaching was heard, so that in 1832 the orthodox contingent withdrew to form its own church and society (although laying claim to the founding date 1732 down to the present day). The First Parish and its church, by then distinctively Universalist, underwent several reorganizations in 1837, 1861, and 1876. More recently, it has merged with a Unitarian church of nineteenth century origin.

SCITUATE, First Parish Church (U).
Congregational Church (C).

The church was gathered on Jan. 8, 1634/35 (Old Style) by persons formerly members of the church gathered at Southwark, England, by Henry Jacob (see BARNSTABLE, West). In 1639, the minister, John Lothrop, and an undetermined number of Scituate church members removed to Barnstable, apparently organizing a new church in that place.

There is no record to indicate whether the remnant at Scituate felt it necessary also to reorganize.

1. The records of the First Congregational Church go back only to 1906.

In 1825, the orthodox of the Church and Parish in Scituate withdrew to form their own church and society. Today, both churches lay claim to the founding date, 1634/35.

Scituate, 1899), p. 90, also lists as a Scituate ruling elder Henry Cobb (the deacon) who was among those who removed to Barnstable in 1639. As far as can be determined, Cobb was not elevated to the eldership until 1670; until then, he served at Barnstable as he had at Scituate, as a deacon.

2. Sometimes given as "Bedbedge."

3. Deane, loc. cit., also mentions as Scituate deacons Richard Sealls and William Gilson, but cites no authority for adding these names to the diaconate.

(see Chilmark, Seconchgut Praying Town [and Church ?]).

[SEEKONK (C).]

The church was gathered in 1643, in that part of Rehoboth which was set off in 1812 as the town of Seekonk. In 1862 the area served by this church was ceded to Rhode Island, becoming part of the town of East Providence. The church thus falls outside the geographical limits of this present study.

This church continues today as the Newman Congregational Church of Rumford, R.I. While its early records have long been lost, quite a few details can be gleaned from Leonard Bliss, Jr., The History of Rehoboth, Bristol County, Massachusetts (Boston, 1836); Sylvanus C. Newman, Rehoboth in the Past: An Historical Oration Delivered on the Fourth of July 1860 (Pawtucket, 1860); D. SHARON, Unitarian Church (U).
Congregational Church (C).

The church was gathered on May 20, 1741 in the Second Precinct of Stoughton (which had been incorporated the previous year). In 1765 the area was renamed Stoughtonham, and in 1783 it became the town of Sharon. In 1821, the orthodox withdrew from the church, forming the Christian Church and Society. The liberal wing saw to the organization of the First Congregational Parish in the same year. The two churches continue as Congregational and Unitarian bodies today, both claiming the eighteenth century date.¹

1. The Unitarian church claims the date 1737, anticipating the actual gathering of the church by five years.

2. George C. Cooke, Origin and Early History of the First Parish, Sharon, Massachusetts (Boston, 1903), suggests that Deacon Joseph Hewins of Stoughton, elected ruling elder at Stoughton in 1720 and (having made no reply) re-elected to that office at Stoughton in 1723, may have served as an elder at Sharon during the latter church's infancy.

The only mention of this Stoughton lay officer in the Sharon records appears in VS I PUB, p. 13, under date of Feb. 25, 1755: "Elder Hewins was buried."

1. The published version omits all details of disciplinary action reported in VS I.

2. Neither Cooke, CR I COPY, nor present-day church officers have any knowledge of records for the years 1735-1813. We must assume, therefore, that the entry made by Emil Oberholzer, Jr., Delinquent Saints (New York, 1956), p. 351, is an error.

SHERBORN, First Parish (U).

The church was gathered on March 26, 1685, its sustaining parish having been organized in 1674.

Early in the nineteenth century, the orthodox and liberal elements separated. Constituting a majority of the church, the orthodox organized a society in 1830. The liberal wing, dominating the parish, reorganized the parish church that same year.

In 1946, the two churches, Pilgrim Congregational and the First Parish Church, federated. In 1961 the Federated Church voted to become the Community Christian Church, associating with the Congregational tradition. Shortly thereafter, the First Parish (Church) voted to resume independent services in the Unitarian tradition. The Community Christian Church voted in 1963 to revive the Pilgrim Congregational Church, and to affiliate with the United Church of Christ, leaving the First Parish Church as the continuing claimant to the 1685 date.

Gathered on Oct. 27, 1742 as the Church in Roadtown, the church's name was changed when the area became the town of Shutesbury in 1761.

The dismissal of the Tory minister in 1778 resulted in his successfully bringing suit against the town to recover his salary. Church activity declined markedly, and only one member was still alive when the church was reorganized in 1806.

The Baptist church, founded in 1780, federated with the re-organized Congregational Church in 1911.

SOUTHBRIDGE, Elm Street (C).

The church was gathered as the Second Church in Charlton on Sept. 16, 1801, at the same time its affiliated Second Religious Society was incorporated. In 1816 the area was made the town of Southbridge, and the names of the church and society were duly changed. The same year saw mention made in the records of Proprietors of the Ministerial Fund. The society was dissolved at the incorporation of the church in 1962. The name "Elm Street Church" is of comparatively recent date.

Minister: no minister was settled here until 1816.

Ruling elders: none.

Deacons: Asa Walker (e. 1801; d. 1814)
Daniel Morse (e. 1801; d. 1832)

STERLING, First (Unitarian-Congregational-Baptist).

The church was gathered on Dec. 19, 1744 as the Church in the Second Precinct of Lancaster, the precinct having been set off in 1742. Popularly known as "Chocksett Church," the organization became the First Church in 1781, when the precinct was made the town of Sterling.

The early nineteenth century saw the orthodox minority of the church and parish withdraw to form their own church and society. In 1947, however, the Unitarian, Congregational and Baptist churches of Sterling united to form The First Church, which continues today.

STERLING, Second (C), extinct.

The church came together in Nov. of 1774, meeting for the next ten years in the home of the Rev. Mr. John Mellen, erstwhile minister of Sterling's First Church. After Mellen's removal from the town in 1784, this group was quickly absorbed by the older church.

No records of this church being extant, nothing is known of the lay officers (if any) of the Second Church.

STOCKBRIDGE, Housatonic Indian Church (C) and First Church (C).

The church was gathered on Oct. 18, 1734. Land in Stockbridge and West Stockbridge had been provided by the General Court, to the end that the Housatonics (Mahicans) might be Christianized and domesticated. Funds provided by interested individuals and by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel among the Indians of New England and Parts Adjacent sustained the enterprise until 1783-1785, when the natives removed to lands given them by the Oneidas at New Stockbridge, N. Y.

What records there are suggest that although a good number of the Stockbridge Indians were baptized and received into church membership, the English settlers came quickly to dominate the life of the church. The church thus had no difficulty in surviving the withdrawal of the Housatonics. Its society was organized in 1825, and dissolved at the incorporation of the church in 1937.

Precinct of Dorchester was annexed to it, and the 1717 church became the First in Stoughton. Stoughton's Second Precinct was incorporated in 1740, and a church (now Sharon First) gathered there in the same year. Stoughton's Third Precinct was incorporated in 1743, and its church (now Stoughton First) was gathered here on Aug. 10, 1744 as the Third in Stoughton.

The Second Precinct, renamed Stoughtonham in 1765, in 1783 became the town of Sharon. The 1744 church (and its 1743 precinct) now became Stoughton's Second Church and Precinct. In 1797, the First Precinct became the town of Canton, carrying with it the 1717 church, and leaving the 1744 church as Stoughton's First Church. It is, of course, with this latter church we have to do.

The orthodox withdrew in 1822 to form the present Congregational Church; the liberals remained in possession of the parish, moving in a brief time from Unitarianism to Universalism. Both churches today claim the 1744 date of origin.

Lt. John Holmes (e. 1795)

In 1792, the only record of the church's preceding history consisted in a brief account of the church's gathering in 1744, and the names of its first twenty-four members.¹ To this account, the second minister added his records for the years 1792-1817. This book, 1744/1792-1817, was sequestered by the orthodox in 1822, then returned to the First Parish, and has since dropped from sight. Similarly, the records of the Unitarian-Universalist body for the years following 1828 have disappeared.

changed. Its Congregational Society was organized in 1831 and dissolved in 1898.

STURBRIDGE, Separate (C), extinct.

The Sturbridge New Lights withdrew from the town church in May of 1747, and on May 10 following, gathered themselves into a Separate Congregational church. Among their number were two deacons of the town church, as well as the man who eventually became their pastor.

In May of 1749, having made a study of New Testament teachings on baptism, the pastor and sixty Separates accepted Baptist principles, received adult baptism, and thereby concluded the church's career as a Separate Congregational church. Those few who did not declare for Baptist sentiments were eventually drawn back into the life of the town church.

Minister: John Blunt (ord. 1748; declared for Baptist principles 1749; returned to peditist sentiments 1752 and was excommunicated by the now-Baptist church; d. 1755)

Ruling elder: David Morse ?¹

Deacons: Deacon Daniel Fiske ?²
Deacon Isaac Newell ?²

The only known records consist in a collection of twelve MS letters, spanning the years 1745-1762, owned and held by the Congregational Library, Boston. Nine of the letters are statements of reasons for separation, given by New Lights to the town church; two are later expressions of sorrow for having engaged in the separation; one is an admonition written to a Separatist by the minister of the town church. Extensive use of this material has been made by Ola E. Winslow in Meetinghouse Hill, 1630-1783 (New York, 1952), pp. 231-236.

SUDBURY, First Parish (U).

The ancient church at Sudbury was gathered in August of 1640, and its associated Precinct on the West Side of the River was incorporated in 1708. The development of a second

1. Isaac Backus, A Church History of New-England, II (Providence, 1784), p. 192, remarks that an early member of the Separate Congregational church, David Morse, was a ruling elder of the Sturbridge Baptist church, and implies that he filled the same office in the short-lived Separate Congregational conventicle.

2. Among the original Separates were Sturbridge deacons Fiske and Newell, and it seems probable that one or both of them served the Separate church in that capacity. See George H. Haynes, Historical Sketch of the First Congregational Church, Sturbridge, Massachusetts (Worcester, 1910), pp. 13-15; C. C. Goen, Revivalism and Separatism in New England, 1740-1800 (New Haven and London, 1962), pp. 101-103.

center of population in 1722 led to the organization of an East (Second) Parish, and on Feb. 11, 1723 to the division of the ancient church into two independent bodies: the West Church (now Sudbury) and the East Church (now Wayland). The first trace of friendly rivalry for the right to the 1640 date appeared in 1765, when the West Church voted itself "the First Church of Sudbury," because the "standing part" of the ancient church had formed a church in the East Parish.¹ The East Church replied in 1780, denominating itself the First Church in East Sudbury; when the area was made the town of Wayland in 1835, the name of the First Church and Parish of Wayland was adopted.² The West (First) Church of Sudbury took the title of First Congregational Unitarian Church in 1844, and its parish was designated the First Unitarian Society. The Trustees of the Sudbury Ministerial Fund had been incorporated in 1817.³

 Jacob Bigelow (ord. 1772; d. 1816)

1. SUDBURY, CR I, p. 217.

2. While it may be splitting hairs to argue the two claims to the 1640 date, both churches obviously being descended from the ancient church, it should be observed that (a) the ministerial continuity rests with Sudbury, (b) from 1723 until 1765 there seems to have been no quarrel with the notion that the West Church was the ancient church, and (c) not until 1780 did the East Church evince much interest in the title "First."

3. The present Congregational Church of Sudbury, formed by orthodox personnel who withdrew from the parish church in 1839-1840, also claims the 1640 date.

4. Sumner C. Powell, Puritan Village: The Formation of a New England Town (New York, 1965), p. 1, refers to one of the founders of Sudbury, Peter Noyes, as a "church elder," but provides no documentation for that claim.

1. A "Summary History" printed in 1832, a copy of which is pasted on the inside cover of CR I, states that in that year, the only surviving church records for the years 1640-1705 consisted in fragmentary vital statistics.

Sumner Powell, op. cit., observes the lack of early church records (p. 202), but then all too casually accepts the verdict of "local historians" (whom he does not identify) that "the first Sudbury 'church' did not even keep a separate book" of records (p. 183). Powell's reasons for punctuating the word church as he does are not explained; his unwarranted assumption that records were not kept is a flaw in an otherwise helpful scholarly performance.

The church was gathered in 1693, being the second church in Swansea.¹ From that time until 1803, it was ecclesiastically independent, requiring of prospective members only an affirmation of general Christian beliefs. From 1803 to 1819, the church was loosely affiliated with the Six-Principle Baptists; then in 1820, it severed that relationship, and remained independent for some sixty more years. About 1880, the church associated with the Rhode Island and

TEMPLETON, First Federated (U/C).

The church was gathered on Dec. 10, 1755 as the Church in Narragansett, No. 6. In 1762, the tract became the town of Templeton, and the church's name was duly changed. The First Parish, organized in 1806, was dissolved in 1923, at the time of the church's incorporation. More recently, a federation has been effected, joining the old Unitarian church with the Congregational body which separated from the town church early in the 19th century.

[TISBURY, Meeting House, (C) & (U) Churches.]

Since reference is occasionally made to early church activities at Tisbury, a brief entry is required at this point.¹

Tisbury's residents were first ministered to by the Rev. John Mayhew, from 1673 to 1689 pastor of the church in what is now West Tisbury. That the Rev. Experience Mayhew accepted a call to be "teacher" at Tisbury² is extremely doubtful, since such acceptance would have conflicted with his missionary work to the whole of the Vineyard Indians. However, it is probable that he, like the Rev. Thomas West (ca. 1745),¹ frequently preached at Tisbury. It is known that in 1779, the Rev. George Daman of West Tisbury was authorized by his congregation to give a fourth of his time to preaching at Tisbury.

Tisbury is frequently called in the records by its Indian name, Takemmy (or Taacame or Taukemy).

Not until about 1788 was a meetinghouse erected in Tisbury, when the use of the building was allocated two-thirds of the time to local Baptists and one-third of the time to Tisbury Congregationalists. By the opening of the 19th century, Baptists and Methodists were sufficiently numerous in the area to permit both to organize churches of their own. The Congregationalists did not gather a church until 1825, nor settle a minister until 1844. In 1859 they gave way to local Universalists and Unitarians, who flourished briefly and then also disappeared from the scene.

TOPSFIELD (C).

Although the church was gathered on Nov. 4, 1663, there is a long-standing tradition of two earlier pastorates. If William Knight was indeed ordained here in 1641,¹ some argument could be made for the existence of a gathered church at Topsfield in that year. Conclusive evidence of such a church's existence, however, is lacking. Knight apparently did preach at Topsfield from 1641 to 1651, and returned to England in 1655 where he died in 1694/95. Similarly, Capt. William Perkins served as a supply preacher at Topsfield from 1655 until the gathering of the church in 1663 (and possibly preached occasionally from then until his death in 1682).

The precinct (frequently denominated "the Precinct at the Hamlet") was incorporated in 1713, and the Congregational Parish in 1824.

TOWNSEND, First Parish (U), extinct.
First Church (C).

The church was gathered on Oct. 16, 1734. In 1830 the orthodox wing of the church withdrew, and soon after organized an affiliated society.

The Unitarian contingent steadily declined in strength, and after 1838 was unable to support a settled minister. In 1852 the meetinghouse was sold to local Methodists. The interests of the Orthodox Society and that of the First Parish were united in the First Parish Religious Society incorporated in 1884; this latter body was dissolved at the time of the church's incorporation in 1916.

1. A church had been gathered at Old Dunstable in 1685, but in 1741 the area (and church) was set off to New Hampshire. For an ill-fated attempt to gather a church at Dunstable in 1747, see "DUNSTABLE, Separate (C), extinct."

2. The church officers believe that the 19th century records of the church and parish, together with some of the church silver, were placed in the keeping of some bank in the area by a former church officer. At the time this inventory was made, the missing items had not been located.

TYRINGHAM, First Church and Society (see Monterey).

UPTON, First (C).

The church was gathered in August of 1735. The First Parish received incorporation in 1834. Short-lived was the organization known as the Stockholders of the Congregational Meeting-house Society, begun in 1848, for after financing the building of a new meetinghouse in 1853, the Stockholders were disbanded.

The church itself was incorporated in 1898, at which time the parish was dissolved.

[UPTON, Unitarian Church (B/U).]

According to one authority,¹ a Baptist church organized in Upton in 1770, at a later (unspecified) date became Unitarian. The actual sequence of events requires some brief exposition.

A Baptist church was gathered in Upton in 1751, and Abraham Bloss² was ordained its minister that same year. After

1. Frederick L. Weis, The Colonial Clergy and The Colonial Churches of New England (Lancaster, Mass., 1936), p. 275.

2. Also given as "Blois" and "Boise."

Bloss' removal from Upton in 1767, the church drifted uncertainly until 1770, when it was reorganized¹ by an "Elder Bois." It was sufficiently stable to settle a minister in 1790, but after his removal was reduced to hearing occasional supply preachers.

In 1824 a new Baptist church was gathered; its leaders, however, were affiliated with the "Christian" movement. In 1847, this church merged its interests with those of the First Unitarian Society, just then come into being. The present Unitarian Church of Upton dates, then, from 1847.

WAKEFIELD, First (C).

Reading was settled in 1639, and its (First) church was gathered on Nov. 5, 1645.

In 1713, the residents of northern Reading successfully petitioned to become a separate precinct. Reading's Second Church was gathered here in 1720, and in 1853 this northern precinct became the town of North Reading, and its church the First in that town.

In 1770, the settlers of southern Reading gathered their own church, Reading's Third (West) Church.

The remainder of Reading (exclusive of North Reading)¹ was divided in 1868 into the towns of Reading and Wakefield. Wakefield carried with it the 1645 church, the church with which we now have to do.

The First (South) Parish of Reading is traditionally dated from 1644. From 1812 to 1868 it was known as the First Parish of South Reading, and after 1868 as the First Parish of Wakefield. The Trustees of the South Parish Ministerial Fund, incorporated in 1823, disbanded ca. 1847.

[WALES (C).]

The West Parish in the District of South Brimfield (which in 1828 became the town of Wales) was incorporated in 1766; however, no Congregational church was gathered here until 1819.

WALPOLE, First (U), extinct.

The church was gathered on July 2, 1730. The Unitarian controversy saw the orthodox Congregationalists withdrawing from the church and parish in 1826 to form the Second or Orthodox Congregational Church and Society. In 1927, these two churches merged with a local Methodist group to form The United Church of Walpole.

WALTHAM, First Parish (U/U).
First Church (C), extinct.

The church was gathered on Feb. 4, 1696¹ in the West Precinct of Watertown, although the precinct was not formally incorporated until 1698. In 1738, the precinct became the town of Waltham, its First Parish was organized, and the church was renamed Waltham's First Church. A Second Religious Society, organized in Waltham in 1820, almost immediately divided into orthodox and Unitarian wings. The latter body retained the title of Second Religious Society, while the orthodox styled² themselves the "First Congregational Church" of Waltham.² Lack of support forced this "First Church" to dissolve in 1840. Meanwhile, in 1838 a merger was effected between the Second Religious Society and the First Parish. Until 1866, the body was called the Independent Congregational Society; then it voted to take the name of the First Parish in Waltham. More recently, this First Parish was joined to the First Universalist Society, the emergent body being styled the First Parish Universalist-Unitarian. Simultaneously, the church of the First Parish was joined to the Universalist Church of Our Saviour.

WAREHAM, First (C).

The church was gathered on Dec. 25, 1739. Church and town came to a parting of the doctrinal ways in 1827, the heart of the quarrel being the orthodox minister's refusal to exchange pulpits with Unitarian clerics.

To protect the minister from dismissal by the town, the orthodox (comprising a majority of the church membership) organized an Evangelical Society. The Unitarians in rebuttal structured the First Parish.

With the dismissal of the minister in 1828, the two prudential bodies found less to divide them, and were eventually reunited, continuing as a single entity until dissolution in 1890, the year of the church's incorporation.

WARWICK, First Parish and Religious Society (U).

The church was gathered on Dec. 3, 1760. The Trustees of the Congregational Society were incorporated in 1779; however, in 1795 the act of incorporation was repealed, and then one section of the repealing act itself repealed in 1800. The Society appears to have suspended operations from 1795 to 1834.

In 1906, church and society were incorporated as the First Parish and Religious Society of Warwick.

WASHINGTON (C), extinct.

The church was gathered in 1772 in the area then known as Hartwood, which five years later became the town of Washington. The Congregational Society appears to have been organized about 1846.

In 1863, the members of this church united with the other Protestants of the town to form the Union Church of Washington.

WATERTOWN, First (U).

The church was gathered on July 30, 1630. When the town was divided into two precincts in 1697, this church was located in the East Precinct. In 1738, the West Precinct became the town of Waltham; then the 1630 church took the title of Church of the First Parish of Watertown. The Trustees of the Watertown Ministerial Fund were incorporated in 1812, the First Parish itself in 1835.

The Dedham church disqualified Carter from nomination to the ruling eldership in 1638, on the grounds that he was about to be chosen to that post by the Watertown church. WATERTOWN, Third (C), extinct.

This church had a clandestine existence for some months during 1720-1721, before it made public its intention of ordaining Robert Sturgeon as its minister.¹

At the request of the ancient Watertown church, an ecclesiastical council met on Feb. 27, 1722. It advised that Sturgeon's church² had been gathered contrary to that act of the General Court which earlier had divided Watertown into eastern (Watertown) and western (Waltham) precincts, so that to ordain Sturgeon would be out of the question. When the Third Church refused to accept this advice, a second council was convened on May 1, 1722, at the behest of the Watertown First (East) and Second (West) Churches. This time, the Third Church was pressed so strenuously to disband, that Sturgeon's dismissal was obtained, ending the church's career for all practical purposes.

Sturgeon, however, did continue to exercise ministerial functions for some short time thereafter; the Watertown First Church records tell of his baptizing a child after the May 1, 1722 council.³

1. REVERE, CR I, pp. 18ff.

2. Since the church in the West Precinct of Watertown (later Waltham) was Watertown's second church, Sturgeon's church is properly designated as the Third Church.

Minister: Robert Sturgeon (sett. 1721; dism. by ecclesiastical council 1722; rem. 1726 ?; d. after 1743)

WAYLAND, First Parish (U).

The ancient church at Sudbury was gathered in August of 1640, and its associated Precinct on the West Side of the River was incorporated in 1708. The development of a second center of population in 1722 led to the organization of an East (Second) Parish, and on Feb. 11, 1723 to the division of the ancient church into two independent bodies: the West Church (now Sudbury) and the East Church (now Wayland).

The first trace of friendly rivalry for the right to the 1640 date appeared in 1765, when the West Church voted itself "the First Church in Sudbury," because the "standing part of the ancient church had formed a church in the East Parish."¹ The East Church replied in 1780, denominating itself the First Church in East Sudbury; when the area became the town of Wayland in 1835, the name of First Church and Parish of Wayland was adopted.

In 1815, the Trustees of the East Sudbury Ministerial Fund received² incorporation, as did the First Parish of Wayland in 1836.²

WELLESLEY (C).

The church was gathered on Sept. 6, 1798 as the Church in West Needham, the West Precinct in the Town of Needham having been incorporated in 1778. The Society was organized in 1864.

In 1881, the precinct became the town of Wellesley, and the name of the church and society were accordingly changed. The church itself was incorporated in 1891.

WELLFLEET (C).

The area, originally known as "Billingsgate," was made the North Precinct of Eastham in 1723. The church was gathered in the same year, although the exact date is in dispute.¹ The Third or North Parish appears to have been organized about 1735.

In 1763, the precinct was made the town of Wellfleet, and the name of the church and parish were appropriately altered.

 Isaiah Lewis (ord. 1730; d. 1786)

1. Frederick L. Weis, The Colonial Clergy and The Colonial Churches of New England (Lancaster, Mass., 1936), p. 277, argues for July 29, 1723, the time of the first minister's ordination. Enoch Pratt, A Comprehensive History, Ecclesiastical and Civil, of Eastham, Wellfleet and Orleans, County of Barnstable, Mass. From 1644 to 1844 (Yarmouth, 1844), argued nearly a century earlier that the church properly should be dated Sept. 23, 1730, the day of the second minister's ordination; the same argument was advanced by Frederick Freeman, The History of Cape Cod (Boston, 1860-1862), II, p. 661.

It being unlikely that Josiah Oakes would have been ordained over a non-existent church in 1723, we can only conclude that Pratt and Freeman mistake a reorganization of the 1723 church for the gathering of a new church.

Wright, Report on the Custody and Condition of the Public Records of Parishes, Towns, and Counties [Boston, 1889], p. 12), they have since dropped from view. One local tradition has it that they have been destroyed; another theory is reported by Emil Oberholzer, Jr. in Delinquent Saints (New York, 1956), p. 352: "The Wellfleet records have come into the possession of a woman who has no title to them but refuses to permit even the minister to consult them."

1. Frederick L. Weis, The Colonial Clergy and The Colonial Churches of New England (Lancaster, Mass., 1936), p. 277, gives the date of Nov. 20, 1774. W. H. Beaman, in Centennial Celebration of the Congregational Church, Wendell, Mass., Wednesday, December 2, 1874 (Amherst, 1875), p. 7, points out, however, that the council invited to superintend the church's gathering met at Shutesbury on Nov. 29, 1774, and that the church covenanted the next day.

Evidence points to a reorganization of the Wenham church on Dec. 10, 1663, but not necessarily to a beginning de novo.¹ The Congregational Parish and Society in Wenham was organized in 1833, and dissolved at the time of the church's incorporation in 1925.

Some evidence for this is supplied by CR I GERRISH, which contains what copyist Joseph Gerrish describes as "A copy of the written Covenant made & consented to at the gathering A chh & ordeining the Rev^d Mr: Antipas Newman their pastor in Wenham."

However, Gerrish made his transcription at least twelve years after the event to which he was not an eye-witness, and there is no guarantee that he was not mistaken about the nature of what took place. Indeed, the transcription may have been made much more than twelve years after the event, and without benefit of any eye-witness testimony.

WENHAM (see Chelmsford).

WEST AMESBURY, Church (see Merrimac).

WEST BARNSTABLE, Church and Parish (see Barnstable).

WESTBORO, First Congregational Society (U).
The (Evangelical) Congregational Church (C).

The church was gathered on Oct. 28, 1724; the First Congregational Parish or Society was organized in 1825. In 1834, the church (dominated by orthodox Congregationalists) separated from the parish, saw to the organization of an Evangelical Society, and took the name "Evangelical Church." The parish church having lost most or all of its members in the separation, it was considered dissolved. Worship services were held, however, until 1850 when the Unitarians of the First Congregational Society reconstituted the First Congregational Church. In 1880, this church and its society were unified under the name of the First Congregational (Unitarian) Society.¹

WEST BOSTON Church and Society (see Boston, Ninth Church).

1. Because the church was considered dissolved during the years 1835-1850, there are no church records for this period.

2. After the unification of church and society in 1880, the records of these merged organizations were kept as a single narrative, i.e., SR II.

WEST BOXFORD (see Boxford, West).

WEST BOYLSTON (C).

The church was gathered on Sept. 15, 1796 as the Church in the Second Precinct of Boylston, Sterling and Holden, four years after the precinct itself was set off. In 1808 the precinct was made the town of West Boylston, and the First Congregational Parish was organized.

WEST BRADFORD, Proprietors of Meeting House (see Haverhill, Bradford).

WEST BRIDGEWATER, First Congregational-Unitarian Church (U).

Made a town in 1656, Bridgewater originally contained present-day Bridgewater, East Bridgewater and West Bridgewater. The oldest church in the area was gathered in what is now West Bridgewater on Feb. 18, 1664.

In 1716 the original town was divided into duly incorporated parts: the North Precinct (containing the church of 1664) and the South Precinct (modern Bridgewater, where the first church was gathered in 1718).

A division of the North Precinct in Bridgewater was effected in 1723: the East Precinct (now East Bridgewater, where a church was gathered in 1724) and the West Precinct (in which the 1664 church was located). In 1822, this West Precinct was made the town of West Bridgewater.

Ministers: James Keith (ord. 1663/64; d. 1719)
 Daniel Perkins (ord. 1721; d. 1782)
 John Reed, D.D. (ord. 1780; d. 1831)

Ruling elders and deacons: due to the loss of the church's records, virtually nothing is known of the lay officers of this church.

Ruling elder: William Brett (d. 1682)

 Nathaniel Brett (d. 1779)

WEST BRIDGEWATER, Separatist (C), extinct.

A New Light separation resulted in the gathering of a Separatist church in this place on Jan. 8, 1749. Its membership was absorbed by the Baptist movement in the town, following the removal of the Separatist pastor in 1751.

WEST BROOKFIELD (C).

The facts concerning the origins of the present Brookfield and West Brookfield churches have been sufficiently

1. Claimed as town property by a former town clerk, since deceased, who reportedly deposited them in a basement vault in the West Bridgewater Town Hall. The present town clerk states that the vault and its contents are inaccessible.

Old Brookfield was incorporated as a town in 1673, and its church was gathered in 1717, the latter event being delayed that long by recurrent troubles with the Indians.² In 1750, a Second (or North) Precinct was set off, and a (second) church gathered there in 1752. (In 1812, this Second Precinct would be incorporated as the town of North Brookfield; the 1752 church is so listed in this inventory.)

Meanwhile, troubles arose in the First (or old) Precinct of Brookfield over the location of the meetinghouse. The old meetinghouse had been situated at Foster's Hill in the western part of the old precinct (viz., in what today is the town of West Brookfield). In 1753, personnel from the southern part of the old precinct began razing the old building with an eye to replacing it with a new edifice on Brookfield Common (viz., in what today is the town of Brookfield). The Foster's Hill group appealed to the General Court, and that august body intervened.

By order of the Court (Nov. 8, 1754), the old (or First) precinct was divided into two parts. The new (western) precinct was to retain the name and powers of the First Precinct of Brookfield, - although when incorporated as a town in 1848, it was given the town name, "West Brookfield!" It is with this latter town and its church (gathered in 1717) that we now have to do.³

1. The culprit appears to have been the Rev. Thomas Noyes, minister (1799-1833) of Needham's Second Church (now Wellesley's First Church), whose notions have misled historians ever since the appearance of his article in CQ, X (1837-38), 48, 53-54. See Charles B. Tolman, An Historical Sermon Delivered in The First Church of Christ (of the Old Town of Brookfield) at West Brookfield, Mass. Sunday, September 18, 1910 (Ware, Mass., 1911).

2. Mention should be made of a local tradition of a "church" (actually a meetinghouse) at Foster's Hill, ca. 1667-1715, served by occasional preachers John Younglove, Joseph Smith, George Phillips, William Grosvenor, John James, and David Elmer. See Henry E. Waite, "Early History of Brookfield, Mass.," NEHGR, XXXV (1881), 333-341.

3. The new (southern) precinct created in 1754 was denominated the Third Precinct; when the Second Precinct achieved townhood in 1812, the Third became the Second Precinct. To complete the confusion, when the First Precinct was incorporated in 1848 as the town of West Brookfield, the Second Precinct inherited the ancient, uncluttered name of "Brookfield," - although the church there had not been gathered until 1756.

WESTFIELD, Separate (C), extinct.

This New Light church was gathered in Westfield some time in 1748, and six years later, Jedidiah Dewey was ordained its minister.

Meanwhile, Separates from Hardwick and Sunderland migrated to Bennington, Vermont, and on Dec. 3, 1762 organized the first Congregational church in that state. Soon afterward, the Bennington church issued an invitation to the Westfield New Lights to come to Vermont and join forces with them. Taking the advice of a New Light ecclesiastical council which met on Aug. 14, 1763, Dewey and his church members removed to Bennington, where Dewey became the pastor of the new church.

WEST NEWBURY, First (C), inactive.

The church was gathered on Oct. 26, 1698 as the Second Church in Newbury, the Second Parish having been organized in 1695. In 1711 the Second Precinct in Newbury was incorporated, and in 1820 became the town of West Newbury. The church thus became the First Church in West Newbury; the First Parish was incorporated in 1824. The parish was dissolved in 1909 at the incorporation of the church. In 1795, just prior to settling Samuel Tomb as minister, the church voted to become Presbyterian, and was taken under the jurisdiction of the Londonderry Presbytery. In 1807, it voted to return to Congregationalism. For further details regarding the churches of the Newbury-Newburyport-West Newbury area, see NEWBURY, First.

WEST NEWBURY, Second (C).

The church was gathered on Sept. 1, 1731 as the Fourth Church in Newbury, the Fourth Parish being organized in the same year. It became the Third Church and Parish in Newbury in 1764 with the setting off of Newburyport as an independent town.¹ In anticipation of the area containing the 1731 church and parish becoming a town, in 1819 these bodies were retitled the West Church and Parish in Parsons. However, the town (set off in 1820) received the name "West Newbury," and the church and parish therefore took the titles of the Second (West) Church and Second Parish in West Newbury. The parish was dissolved at the incorporation of the church in 1941.

WEST SPRINGFIELD, First (C).

The church was gathered on June 16, 1698 as the Church in the Second (West) Precinct in Springfield, the precinct having been incorporated two years earlier. When the precinct became the town of West Springfield in 1774, the name of the church, as well as of its now-parish, was changed. The Trustees of the Ministerial Fund in the First Parish received incorporation in 1820.

A dissident group split off from the First Church in 1871, forming the Park Street Church; however, in 1909, the two churches merged as one.

WEST TISBURY (C).

The date of the church's gathering is uncertain, although the best evidence points to 1673.¹ The Westerly Parish in the town of Tisbury, in which this church was located, was set off in 1796, shortly after the erection of a meeting-house in the eastern part of the town (now Tisbury). The First Congregational Society was organized in 1878. In 1892 the old Westerly Parish became the town of West Tisbury.

WEST TISBURY, Christiantown Indian Church (C), extinct.

This praying town, variously known as Manitouwattootan and Ohkonkemme, and finally as Christiantown, was set apart by Josias, the sachem of Takemmy, in 1660. The year of the church's gathering has been placed as early as 1680 and as late as 1705.¹ Until 1786, preaching was supplied by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel among the Indians in New England, and thereafter by the Boston Society. By 1850, the church had become extinct; the meetinghouse, however, still stands.

WEYMOUTH, First (C).

The church, although provisionally "gathered before,"¹ was covenanted on Jan. 30, 1639. In 1723, Weymouth was divided into First (North) and Second (South) Precincts. The church being located in the former area, became variously known as the First or North Church in Weymouth, or First Church in North Weymouth. The precinct eventually became the First Parish.

1. "At this court [held on July 8, 1635] Wessagusset was made a plantation, and Mr. [Joseph] Hull, a minister in England, and twenty-one families with him, allowed to sit down there -- after called Weymouth." James K. Hosmer (ed.), Winthrop's Journal "History of New England" 1630-1649 (New York, 1908), I, p. 154.

Under date of Jan. 9, 1638, Winthrop continues: "Divers of the elders went to Weymouth, to reconcile the differences between the people and Mr. Jenner, whom they had called thither with intent to have him their pastor. They had good success of their prayers." Ibid., p. 258.

And finally, under date of Jan. 30, 1639, the governor records: "A church was gathered at Weymouth with approbation of the magistrates and elders. It is observable, this church, having been gathered before, and so that of Lynn, could not hold together, nor could have any elders join or hold with them. The reason appeared to be, because they did not begin according to the rule of the gospel" Ibid., p. 292.

From Winthrop's account, it is evident that the events of 1635, as far as the gathering of the church is concerned, constituted only a provisional beginning. If a church covenant was subscribed during the years 1635-1638, it was considered as being of no effect, when the people of Weymouth joined in covenant on Jan. 30, 1639.

The church's recent claim to having been founded in 1623, although accepted by Robert T. Swan, "Tenth Report on the Custody and Condition of the Public Records of Parishes, Towns, and Counties," Public Documents of Massachusetts . . . for the Year 1897, II (Boston, 1898), 142, is therefore disallowed. Frederick L. Weis, The Colonial Clergy and The Colonial Churches of New England (Lancaster, Mass., 1936), p. 279, presses for the date, July of 1635, and elsewhere (p. 116) names Joseph Hull as "the first minister" at Weymouth, a claim that should be taken only in a provisional sense.

Ministers:	Joseph Hull	(sett. 1635; rem. 1639; d. 1665)
	Thomas Jenner	(sett. 1636; rem. 1640; d. 1676)
	Robert Lenthall	(sett. 1637; rem. 1639; d. 1658)
	Samuel Newman	(inst. 1638/39 as "the first minister"; rem. 1644; d. 1663)

Ruling elders: the lack of 17th century records prevents our knowing much about the Weymouth ruling eldership, although other sources clearly indicate that the church employed such an officer as early as 1646.²

WILBRAHAM, United (C).

The church was gathered on June 24,¹ 1741 as the Church in the Fourth Precinct in Springfield. The precinct became the town of Wilbraham in 1763, and the church's name was accordingly changed.

In 1782, the town was divided into First (North) and Second (South) Parishes, the first encompassing the church of 1741 which became popularly known as the North Congregational Church.²

In 1914, this church merged with a local Methodist church, and took the title, "United Church."

1. The area was originally known as "Springfield Mountain."

2. The Second (South) Parish became the town of Hampden in 1878.

WINDSOR, Second (C), extinct.

". . . after Mr. Avery's dismissal [in 1777], the Chh. was sometime destitute of a Pastor, and very small. After this there came among them one John Eliot, and a pretense being made that there was no Chh. in this place, a Chh. was formed, over which he was ordained. But, his conduct being unsuitable, after about three months from the time of his ordination, he was dismissed. Mr. Avery's Chh. though very small, still remained in existence." (WINDSOR, CR I, pp. 2-3.)

Nothing further is known about this short-lived church, or its pastor, John Eliot.

[WINTHROP, Union Church (C).]

In 1955, the Union Congregational Church in Winthrop formally observed its "two hundredth anniversary," necessitating some brief entry in this inventory.

Stirred by the preaching of George Whitefield, the residents of Point Shirley (now Winthrop) commenced the construction of a meetinghouse in 1755. Preaching was supplied from the latter part of that year, and in 1756 the town of Chelsea (of which Point Shirley was a part) voted to increase taxes at the Point to supply ministers for the meetinghouse. By 1780, the failure of the fishing industry had reduced the Point's population to two families, and in 1817 the building was dismantled.

No church was gathered in Winthrop until 1896, when the Union Congregational Church was recognized by an ecclesiastical council and received incorporation from the Commonwealth.

See 1755-1955. 200th Anniversary of Congregationalism in Winthrop. The Union Congregational Church, Winthrop, Massachusetts (n.p., 1955).

WOBURN, First (C).

The church was gathered on Aug. 14, 1642. The Trustees of the Woburn Ministerial Fund were incorporated in 1810. The First Parish, organized in 1724, was incorporated in 1816.

1. The church's frequent claims to having been organized in 1716 (see the several church manuals listed below) confuse the early stages of organization with the actual gathering of the church in 1719. See Charles E. Stevens, Worcester Churches, 1719-1889 (Worcester, 1890).

2. Although thus reported in The History, Articles of Faith, Covenant, and Standing Rules, of The First Church in Worcester, Mass. (The Old South:) with A Catalogue of its Officers and Members, Worcester, March 25, 1854 (Worcester, 1854), one is prompted to wonder if there were not two Deacon Daniel Heywoods during the 18th century. The Heywood who died in 1773 was seventy-nine years of age, which would have made him only twenty-two at the time of his election, extraordinarily young to be chosen to such a post in 1716.

The extant 18th century church records are fragmentary, consisting largely of vital statistics. The records are owned by the church, and unless otherwise noted, are deposited with the American Antiquarian Society, Worcester.

church of 1639. Its pastor, Joseph Hull, was excommunicated by the church at (West) Barnstable in 1641 for having broken communion with them, and in 1643 was forbidden by court action to exercise any ministry among the Separatists. Later in 1643, Hull and his wife were readmitted to fellowship at Barnstable, and it appears that the Separatist Church did not long outlive his change of heart.

Minister: Joseph Hull (sett. 1640-1643; d. 1665)
